Miss Emma Stevens, who is spending her vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Boylan, entertained Mr. Murey, of Pittsburg, over Sunday.

I am now prepared to bore tubular wells, 2 and 3 inch, on short notice. Prices reasonable. Address W. G. Hucker, Lake Villa, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Neils Petersen will build a new residence upon their farm recently purchased of Mr. Noonan and otherwise wish them all manner of success.

John Martin, who has been a resident of Antioch for the past three months, moved with his family to their former home at Oak Park, Thursday.

Messrs. Sibley & Pitman have finished the carpenter work of the new M. E. church at Richmond and the structure is now in the hands of the plasterers.

The Ladies of the Angola Cemetery society will meet with Mrs. L. M. Cribb Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 19. Everyone is cordially invited.

Supervisor M. T. Lamey, of Barrington, with the Road Commissioners were in Antioch in the interest of the Mill Creek bridge project. Mr. Lamey and friends made the News office a pleasant call.

Dr. Vann, of Chicago, spent Tuesday evening and Wednesday with his family at the Island in Lake Mare, and accompanied by the family made an excursion trip down Fox river as far as Carey, visiting various points of interest enroute.

Thursday (today) the team of Lake Lodge, 723, I. O. O. F., of this place will go to Barrington where they will institute a lodge and confer the several degrees. A crowd of members will accompany the team and we predict for them a good time.

Friday evening a lawn social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. Burnett, under the management of the Rebekah lodge of our village, and while the attendance was not large a good time is reported by those present.

Married—Mr. Harry B. Smith and Miss Olive I. Mathis, August 4th, 1902, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Viola Pratt, 633 E. 49th street, Chicago, by the Rev. H. I. Rasmus, pastor of the M. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Klein and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. John Williamson and two of their children, of Fox Lake, and Mr. and Mrs. James Schroder, of Providence, R. I., were guests of Mrs. Dr. Venn at her summer home on the Island in Lake Marie Tuesday. The party visited Channel lake on board the steamer Adele and expressed themselves as highly pleased with the up-to-date chain of lakes and greatly surprised at their extent and beauty.

If you are in the market for a house and lot in or around Antioch, or wish a purchase a farm, borrow money or make a loan, or in quest of desirable lake front property, call and see me as I have some attractive bargains. J. J. Burke, real estate and loans, Antioch, Ill.

Dr. C. E. Mandeville, presiding elder of the Chicago northern district of the Rock River conference, will preach at the church next Sunday evening. Monday morning, Aug. 18th, at 8 o'clock a. m. at the church, occurs the 4th quarterly conference. All official members are requested to be present.

After "chewing chaff" for over forty years, C. B. (Dook) Harrison has again donned the blouse and is superintending the threshing machine recently sold by him to T. R. Brogan. Sam Smoke has charge of the engine and is a competent hand. It would take "a wise guy" to give Dook any new pointers on a threshing machine, and reinforced by the veteran Pat Shields, Mr. Brogan has certainly a strong team in the field and will doubtless do a big fall's work.

New Trolley for Fox Lake.

A trolley line to Fox Lake region is projected according to papers of incorporation filed for record yesterday. The company is known as the Chicago, Milwaukee Avenue and Inland Lakes Traction company, and is to build a line from the intersection of Chicago city limits and Milwaukee avenue, following the latter in a northwesterly direction.

The members of the law firm of Watter and Langhen figure as incorporators. The capital stock is $50,000 in 500 shares, of which Dr. George Leininger holds 200 and Oscar Lewis, Louis Kaminsky, and A. J. Wittman 100 shares each. These four, together with Gideon F. Laaghen, form the board of directors for one year.

The Sun Is Sold.

A. K. Sterns has sold the Daily and Weekly Sun, established by him a few years ago, and he will retire from the Lake county newspaper field to devote his time and energies to "Flour and Feed," a journal of the milling trade also established by Mr. Sterns and conducted by him in connection with his newspaper enterprise, and also to the practice of law.

The purchaser of the Sun is Alderman Frank T. Fowler, of Chicago, a man who although he is not and probably never will be a citizen of Lake county, is known here especially as a politician. In Chicago, Mr. Fowler's home city, he has achieved much political success and is recognized as a leader—in fact a general—in the political jousts of the big metropolis, being noted as one of the shrewdest and most adroit political workers of the city of Chicago. Hence Mr. Fowler's career is a well known one, and, in addition, he is reputed to be a man of great wealth. Though without journalistic experience, the generalship, acumen and sagacity which have wrought out his past political and other successes will no doubt bring a similar result from his new venture.

The News welcomes Mr. Fowler to the local newspaper field.

New Opera House for Waukegan.

Waukegan is contemplating the building of a brand new opera house to be centrally located. The building will be a large one with hotel accommodations, stores, offices and theatre rooms in the rear. The project has progressed to the extent of formulating plans for the building, the proposed site of which will front on two of the principal streets of the city. Capital is looking to the project with considerable favor and it is more than likely it will be consummated.

Teachers' Examination.

An examination of candidates for teachers' certificates and of reading circle members for renewal of certificates will be held at Waukegan Friday and Saturday, August 23 and 24, and at Grayslake Monday, Aug. 25.

FAILED TO SECURE VOTE

LONG SESSION IS HELD BY WAUKEGAN COUNCIL.

Huge Project Hinging on the Waukegan-Fox Lake R. R.—All Towns Connect Waukegan.

The failure in securing the Waukegan, Fox Lake and Western railroad to Waukegan because of a failure to secure a two-thirds vote in the City Council on the contingent electric lighting contract at last Saturday night's meeting of the aldermen, two of whom saw fit to vote against it, it has brought a new anxiety to Waukegan citizens because of new developments as to the importance of that railroad to the city, as the presence in Waukegan last night of Messrs. E. W. Stees and W. T. Arthur, of Chicago, unfolded a project of magnitude and promise for Waukegan's welfare which had not been generally dreamed of.

Messrs. Stees and Arthur are the promoters of the electric line to be built from Elgin to Barrington, thence to Waukegan, and from there to the Lake region. This line is now developed beyond a matter of promotion. Between Barrington and Waukegan all the right of way has been secured except such as will have to be acquired by condemnation, the steel and ties for this ten mile stretch is bought and a contract let for its construction by November 1st. Right of way to Elgin is now being secured, and it is expected to open up this outlet to three good lakes in readiness for the winter ice business.

From Waukegan the project is for the continuation of the road to the Fox Lake region, and upon this trip these gentlemen were viewing the route with a view to immediate work at securing the right of way. Their visit to Waukegan was to voice their desire to meet and connect with the Waukegan, Fox Lake and Western line at Grayslake.

The importance of this combination to Waukegan is too obvious to need comment. The Waukegan-Fox Lake line would be an artery fed by branches to the popular lake resort region, and to Waukegan, Lake Zurich and Barrington. It would be further fed by the various steam roads

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN

U. S. Department of Agriculture, Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Aug. 12, 1902.

Showers occurred occasionally over most of the state during the week, most frequently in the central district, and in the southern district showers were light, in a few localities the drouth remains unbroken. Over most of the state the rain fall was sufficient to meet the needs of vegetation. In some localities farm work was interrupted but generally for a short time. In the northern part of the state the weather was rather cool, especially at night. As a whole the weather has been favorable for crops and farm work. Considerable damage was done by a severe storm in Pike county. Wheat and rye in shocks has nearly all been threshed. A good yield continues to be reported. Oat harvest is practically over. Many fields in the northern part of the state were not harvested on account of the very wet ground. Threshing is well advanced. The yield is generally good. The corn prospect continues good. The soybean weather for the past week has been favorable for this crop. In the northern and central districts the conditions are more favorable than in the southern. Chinch bugs have attacked the crop in some localities. Broom corn is a good crop and harvesting has begun. The second crop of clover is good. The apple prospect has improved, but some damage from bitter rot has been reported. Garden truck is abundant. Plowing for wheat has been carried on to some extent.

The Old Settler's Picnic.

Out of a gathering of about one hundred members and perhaps a hundred guests has grown the great gathering which occurs on the Old Settler's grounds at Pad-dock's Lake, on the last Thursday of August each year. Up to 1892 there was no shelter more than that afforded by the grand old oaks which adorn the picnic park. For ten consecutive years we have enjoyed the use of the pavilion, the very best building of its character to be found in the state of Wisconsin. From the earliest days of the Old Settler's Club its records show that it

CAR STRIKE ANTICIPATED

COMPANIES MUST COME TO TERMS BY MONDAY.

Greatest Street-Car Strike in Years Is Predicted If Agreement is not Soon Reached.

A complete tie up of the street rail-way lines of Chicago by next Monday or Tuesday and the declaration of a boycott against them by the 150,000 union labor men of the city and their families is inevitable unless peace terms with the companies are reached by that time.

Those familiar with the conditions are alarmed at the situation. They say that so far as the public is concerned, no labor trouble since the great railway strike of 1894 would equal a tie-up of the street car lines. The recent strike of the packing teamsters and of the freight handlers, in which the teamsters took part, would be considered tame in comparison, it is said.

Leaving out of consideration the greater inconvenience to the public, it is deemed certain that any attempt to move cars on the part of the companies would result in serious clashes. Teamsters also, it is declared would have an opportunity to block the tracks and cause no end of trouble.

Plans for the proposed tie up in the event of the refusal of the companies to grant the demands of the men, were discussed at a joint meeting of the members of the executive boards of the six unions of street car men of the city in conference with the executive board of the Chicago Federation of Labor, at 155 Randolph street yesterday.

I fear that a general strike will be called said an influential labor leader after the meeting. Up to this time I felt sure that serious trouble would be averted, but according to reports made at the meeting the men are deeply stirred at what they consider flagrant violations by the companies of the union agreements and are in no mood to parley further. Unless a satisfactory arrangement with the companies is made by Monday night the men will vote to walk out. Nothing is being done hastily. If a tie-up comes it will be complete. Not a wheel will turn.

Announcement.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for County Clerk of Lake County, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

J. A. HOFFMAN.

Announcement.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of County Judge of the county of Lake, at the ensuing Republican Convention. In so doing, I have only to say that it will be impossible for me to make a personal canvass of the County, and that I shall rely upon my friends for the support that I shall receive in the Convention. Trusting that my past conduct as an officer and citizen of this county has merited your approval.

C. T. HEYDECKER.

For County Superintendent.

If I have any political friends left in the county since the invasion of opposing candidates, they are hereby informed that I am still a candidate for re-nomination for the office of County Superintendent of Schools, subject to the action of the forthcoming Republican County Convention. I have no time to canvass.

W. M. MARVIN.

For County Treasurer.

Confident that I may lawfully hold the office for the coming term, I hereby announce myself a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to the approval of the County Republican Convention.

GEORGE N. GRIDLEY.

For County Sheriff.

I hereby announce myself Republican candidate for Sheriff of Lake county, subject to the decision of the Republican county convention.

FRANK D. FRITSON.

Gray's Lake, Ill.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of County Treasurer of Lake county, subject to the will of the Republican County Convention, and solicit the support of my friends.

A SISTER'S VENGEANCE

By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

"Curse them!" cried Abel, as he reached the other side of the point, and saw that which his sister had seen from the cliff behind the cottage.

He looked round him for a fresh way of escape. There was the sea; if they liked to leap in and swim; but they could be easily overtaken. The rocks above them were too overhanging to climb, and there was no other way, unless they returned, and tried to rush through their pursuers; for beyond the point the tide beat upon the cliff.

"No good, Bart; we're trapped," said Abel, stolidly. "I'll never forgive her—never!"

"Yes, you will," said Bart, sitting down on a rock, and carefully taking off his cap to wipe his heated brow. "You will some day. Why, I could forgive her anything—I could. She's a wonderful gell; but, I say, my hips are very sore."

He sat staring down at the boat beyond the point, the anchor having been taken on board, and the oars being out to keep her off the rocks, as she rose and fell with the coming tide.

"No!" said Abel, bitterly. "I'll never forgive her—never!"

"Nay, lad, don't say that," said Bart, rubbing one side. "Hey, lass! There she is. Top of the cliff. Look at her, make."

"No," said Abel; "let her look—at her cowardly work."

"Now, then!" shouted the head constable, as he came panting up. "Is it surrender, or fight?"

For answer, Abel climbed slowly down to the sands, followed by Bart; and the next minute they were surrounded and stood with gyves upon their wrists.

"Warm work," said the constable, cheerfully; "but we've got you safe now."

In silence the party with their prisoners walked slowly back, and beneath the spot where Mary stood like a figure carved out of rock, far above their heads, till they had gone out of sight, without once looking up or making a sign.

Then the poor girl sank down in the rocky niche where she had climbed first, and burst into an agonized fit of weeping.

"Father—mother—brother—all gone! Lover false! Alone—alone—alone!" she sobbed. "What have I done to deserve it all? Nothing!" she cried, fiercely, as she sprang to her feet, and turned, and she let herself slide landward. "Yes, yes, but love a cold, cruel wretch. 'Nay, love; and now—oh, how I hate him—and all the world!'"

She sank down again in the niche all of a heap, and sat there, with the sun slowly sinking lower, and the seabirds wheeling round and round above her head, and watching her with inquisitive eyes, as they each now and then uttered a mournful wail, which sounded sympathetic.

And there she sat, hour after hour, till it was quite dark, when she began slowly to descend, asking herself what she should do to save her brother and his friend, both under a misconception, but suffering for her sake.

"And I stay here!" she said, passionately. "Let them think what they will, I'll try and save them, for they must be in prison now."

Mary was quite right; for as night fell Abel Dell and Bart, his companion, were partaking of a very frugal meal, and made uncomfortable by the fact that it was not good, and that they—men free to come and go on sea and land—were now safely caged behind a massive iron grill.

"Well," said Bart, at last, "I'm only sorry for one thing now."

"What's that—Mary being so base?" Mary being so base?

"Nay, I'm sorry for that," replied Bart, "but what I meant was that I didn't give the captain one hard 'un on the head."

CHAPTER V.

The laws were tremendously stringent in those days when it was considered much easier to bring an offender's bad career to an end than to keep him at the nation's expense; and when the stealing of a sheep was considered a crime to be punished with death on an attack upon the sacred person of one of the king's officers by a couple of notorious law-breakers was not likely to be looked upon leniently by a judge well known for stern sentences.

But a jury of Devon men was sitting upon the offense of Abel Dell and Bart Wigley, and feeling disposed to deal easily with a couple of young fellows whose previous bad character was all in connection with smuggling, a crime with the said jury of a very light eye, certainly not black. Abel and Bart escaped the rope, and were sentenced to transportation to one of his majesty's colonies in the West Indies, there to do convict work in connection with plantations, or the making of roads, as their task masters might think fit.

Time glided by, and Mary Dell found that her life at home had become insupportable.

She was not long in finding that, now that she was left alone and unprotected, she was not to be free from persecution. Her contemptuous rejection of Captain Armstrong's advances seemed to have the effect of increasing his persecution; and one evening at the end of a couple of months, Mary Dell sat on one of the rocks outside the cottage door, gazing out to sea, and watching the ships sail westward, as she wondered whether those on board would ever see the brother who seemed to be all that was left to her in this world.

That particular night the thought which had been hatching in her brain ever since Abel had been sent away flew forth fully fledged and ready, and she rose from where she had been sitting in the evening sunshine, and walked into the cottage.

She went into her brother Abel's bedroom, where she stayed for some minutes, and then, with a quick, resolute step, she re-entered the cottage kitchen, thrust the few embers together that burned upon the hearth, took a pair of scissors from a box, and again seated herself before a glass.

The sun was setting, and filled the slate-floored kitchen with light which flashed back from the blurred looking glass, and cast a furious glare in the girl's stern countenance, with its heavy, dark brows, sun-browned, ruddy cheeks, and gleaming eyes.

Snip! The sharp scissors had passed through one lock of the massive black tresses which she had shaken over her shoulders, and which then rippled to the cottage floor.

Snip!

Another cut, and two locks had fallen. Then rapidly snip, snip, snip—a curious thick, sharp snip—and the great waves of glorious hair kept falling as the bare, sun-browned, ruddy arms played here and there, and the steel blades glittered and opened and closed, as if arm, hand and scissors formed the neck, head and angry bill of some fierce bird attacking that well-shaped head, and at every snap took off a thick tress of hair.

An hour later, just as the red moon rose slowly above the surface of the sea, a sturdy looking young man, with a stout stick in one hand—the very stick which had helped to belabor Captain Armstrong—and a bundle tied up in a handkerchief beneath his arm, stepped out of the cottage, changed the key from inside to outside, closed the old door, locked it, dragged out the key, and with a sudden jerk sent it flying far out into deep water beyond the rocks. Then the figure turned once more to the cottage, gazed at it fixedly for a few moments, took a step or two away; but sprang back directly with an exceeding bitter cry, and kissed the rough, unpainted woodwork again and again with rapid action, and then dashed off to the foot of the cliff and climbed rapidly to the sheep track—the faintly seen path that led toward Slapton Lea and the old hall, where the captain still stayed with his young wife, and then joined the west road which led to Plymouth.

She strode on manfully for another quarter of a mile, when all at once there was a stoppage, for another figure was seen coming from the direction of Torcross, and the moon shining full upon the face showed plainly who it was.

There was no question of identity, for that evening Captain James Armstrong—whose journey had been postponed—had snubbed his young wife cruelly, quarreled with his cousin Humphrey, who had been there to dine, and then left the house, determined to go down to Mary Dell's solitary cottage.

"Who's this?" muttered the captain. "Humph! sailor on the tramp to Plymouth. Well, he won't know me. I won't turn back."

He strode on a dozen yards and then stopped short, as the figure before him had stopped a few moments before; and then a change came over the aspect of the captain. His knees shook, his face turned wet, and his throat grew dry.

It was horrible; but there could be no mistake. "Abel Dell!" he cried, hoarsely, as he leaped at the idea that the brother had returned in spirit, to save his sister from all harm.

"Out of my path!" rang forth in answer, the voice being loud, imperious and fierce; and then, in a tone of intense hatred and suppressed passion, the one word—"Dog!"

As the last word rang out there was a whistling as of a stick passing through the air, a tremendous thud, and the captain fell headlong upon the rocky ground.

Then there was utter silence as the young sailor placed one foot upon the prostrate man's chest, stamped upon it savagely, and strode on right away over the wild country bordering the sea.

The figure loomed up once in the moonlight, as the captain rose slowly upon one elbow and gazed after it, to see that it seemed to be of supernatural proportions, and then he sank back again with a groan.

"It's a spirit," he said, "come back to her," and then the prostrate man died away.

CHAPTER VI.

Someone was singing a west-country ditty. There was a pause in the singing, and the striking of several blows with a rough hoe, to the destruction of weeds in a coffee plantation; while, as the chops of the hoe struck the clods of earth, the fetters worn by the strikers gave forth faint clinks.

"Oh, I say, Abel, mate; don't, lad, don't."

"Don't what?" said Abel Dell, resting upon his hoe, and looking up at big Bart Wigley, clothed like himself, armed with a hoe, and also decorated with fetters, as he stood wiping the perspiration from his forehead.

"Don't sing that there old song. It do make me feel so unked."

"Unked, Bart? Well, what if it does? These are unked days."

"Ay; but each time you sing that I seem to see the rocks along by the shore at home, with the ivy hanging down, and the sheep feeding, and the sea rolling in, and the blue sky, with gulls a-flying; and it makes me feel like a boy again, and, big as I am, as if I should cry."

"Always were like a big boy, Bart. Hoe away, lad; the overseer's looking."

Bart went on chopping weeds, diligently following his friend's example, as a sour-looking, yellow-faced man came by in company with a soldier loosely shouldering his musket. But they passed by without speaking, and Abel continued:

"There's sea here, and blue sky and sunshine."

"Ay," said Bart; "there's sunshine hot enough to fry a mackerel. Place is reet; but it aren't home, Abel, it aren't home."

"Home! no," said the young man, savagely. "But we have no home. She spoiled that."

"Ah, you're a hard 'un, Abel," remarked Bart, after a time.

"Yes; and you're a soft 'un, Bart. She could always turn you round her little finger."

"Ay, bless her; and she didn't tell on us."

"Yes, she did," said Abel, sourly; and he turned back upon his companion, and tolled away to hide the working of his face.

The sun shone down as hotly as it can shine in the West Indies, and the coarse shirts the young men wore showed patches of perspiration where the perspiration came through; but they worked on, for the labor deadened the misery in their breasts.

"How long have we been here, mate?" said Bart, after a pause.

"Dunno," replied Abel, fiercely.

"How long will they keep us in this here place?" said Bart, after another interval, and he looked from the beautiful shore at the bottom of the slope on which they worked to the cluster of stone and wood-built buildings, which formed the prison and the station farm, with factory and mill, all worked by convict labor, while those in the neighborhood were managed by blacks.

Abel did not answer, only scowled fiercely; and Bart sighed and repeated his question.

"Till' we die!" said Abel, savagely; "same as we've seen other fellows die—of fever, and hard work, and the lash. Curse the captain! Curse—"

Bart clapped one hand over his companion's lips, and he held the other behind his head, dropping his hoe to leave full liberty to rage.

"I never quarrel with you, Abel, lad," he said, shortly; "but if you says words again that poor gell, I'm going to fight—and that won't do. Is it easy?"

Abel seemed disposed to struggle; but he gave in, nodded his head, and Bart loosed him and picked up his hoe, just as the overseer, who had come softly up behind, brought down the whip he carried with stinging violence across the shoulders of first one and then the other.

The young men sprang round savagely; but there was a sentry close behind, musket-armed and with bayonet fixed, and they knew that fifty soldiers were within call, and that if they struck their taskmaster down and made for the jungle they would be hunted out with dogs, be shot down like wild beasts, or die of starvation, as other unfortunates had died before them.

There was nothing for it but to resume their labor and hoe to the clanking of their fetters, while, after a promise of what was to follow, in the shape of tying up to triangles, and the cat, if they quarreled again, the overseer went on to see to the others of his flock.

"It's worse than a dog's life!" said Abel, bitterly. "A dog does get petted as well as kicked. Bart, lad, I'm sorry I got you that lash."

"Nay, lad; never mind," said Bart. "I'm sorry for you; but don't speak hard things of Mary."

"I'll try not," said Abel, as he heeded away excitedly; "but I hope this coffee we grow may poison those who drink it."

Bart was close up to a dense patch of forest, some wild tangle of cane and creosote, which literally tied the tall trees together and made the forest impassable—when the shrieking of a kind of Jay which had been flitting about excitedly stopped, and was followed by the melodious whistle of a white bird and the twittering of quite a flock of little fellows of a gorgeous scarlet crimson. Then the shrieking of several parrots answering each other arose; while just above Bart's head, where clusters of trumpet-blossoms hung down from the edge of the forest, scores of brilliantly scaled humming birds literally swarmed about almost incessantly, and then suspended themselves in midair as they probed the nectaries of the flowers with their long bills.

Bart glanced at his fellow-convict and was about to work back, when there came a sound from out the dark forest which made him stare wildly, and then the sound arose again. Bart changed color and did not stop to hoe, but walked rapidly across to Abel.

"What's the matter?" said the latter.

"Dunno, lad," said the other, rubbing his brow with his arm; "but there's something wrong."

"What is it?"

"That's what I dunno; but just now something said quite plain, 'Bart, Bart!'"

"Nonsense! You were dreaming."

"Nay, I was wide awake as I am now, and as I turned and stared it said it again."

"Poll parrot," said Abel, gruffly. "Go on with your work. Here's the overseer."

The young men worked away, and their supervisor passed them, and apparently satisfied, continued his journey toward Mary Dell's cottage.

"May have been a poll parrot," said Bart. "They do talk plain, Abel, lad; but this sounded like something else."

"What else could it be?"

"Sounded like a ghost."

Abel burst into a hearty laugh—so hearty that Bart's face was slowly over-spread by a broad smile.

"Why, lad, that's better," he said, grimly. "I ain't seen you do that for months. Work away."

The hint was given because of the overseer glancing in their direction; and they now worked on together slowly, going down the row toward the jungle, at which Bart kept on darting uneasy glances.

"Enough to make a man laugh to hear you talk of ghosts, Bart," said Abel, after a time.

"What could it be, then?"

"Parrot some lady tamed," said Abel, shortly, as they worked on side by side, "escaped to the woods again. Some of these birds talk just like a Christian."

"Ay," said Bart, after a few moments' quiet thought; "I've heard 'em, lad; but there's no poll parrot out here as knows me."

"Knows you?"

"Well, didn't I tell you it called me 'Bart, Bart!'"

"Sounded like it," said Abel, inconspicuously. "What does he want?"

For just then the overseer shouted, and signed to the gangmen to come to him.

"To begin another job—log-rolling, I think," growled Bart, shouldering his hoe.

At that moment, as Abel followed his example, there came in a low, eager tone of voice from out of the jungle, twenty yards away.

"Bart!—Abel!—Abel!"

"Don't look," whispered Abel, who reeled as if struck, and recovered himself to catch his companion by the arm. "All right!" he said aloud; "we'll be here to-morrow. We must go."

CHAPTER VII.

It was quite a week before the two young men were at work in the plantation of young trees again, and during all that time they had feverishly discussed the voice they had heard. Every time they approached the borders of the plantation where it ran up to the virgin forest they had been on the qui vive, expecting to hear their names called again, but only to be disappointed; and, after due consideration, Abel placed a right interpretation upon the reason.

"It was someone who got ashore from a boat," he said, "and managed to crawl up there. It's the only place where anyone could get up."

"No old mate would take all that trouble for us, lad. It's someone Mary's sent to bring us a letter and a bit of news."

It was at night in the prison lines that Bart said this, and then he listened wonderingly in the dark, for he heard something like a sob from close to his elbow.

"Abel, minter!" he whispered.

"Don't talk to me, old lad," came back hoarsely after a time. "And then, after a long silence. 'Yes, you're right. Poor lass—poor lass!'"

"Say that again, Abel; say that again," whispered Bart, excitedly.

"Poor lass! I've been too hard on her. She didn't get us took."

"Thank God!"

These were Bart's hoarsely whispered words, choked with emotion; and directly after, as he lay there, Abel Dell felt a great, rough, trembling hand pass across his face and search about him till it reached his own, which it gripped and held with a strong, firm clasp, for there was beneath Bart's rough, husk-like exterior a great deal of the true, loyal material of which English gentlemen are made; and when toward morning those two prisoners fell asleep in their chains, hand was still gripped in hand, while the dreams that brightened the remaining hours of their rest from penal labor were very similar, being of a rough home down beneath Devon's lovely cliffs, where the sea ran sparkling over the clean-washed pebbles, and the handsome face of Mary smiled upon each in turn.

POSES AS TRAMP; WINS A BRIDE.

Ragged, Unshaven Hired Man Turns Out to Be a Rich Squire.

Miss Laura B. Keller, of Montrose, W. Va., a girl of exceptional beauty and a village belle, advertised in a matrimonial paper for a correspondent, thinking to have sport. Two of the replies interested her and she began a correspondence with the writers. Photographs were exchanged and a meeting with the two suitors was arranged.

Prior to the meeting a tramp appeared at the Keller home and procured employment. He was ragged and unshaven, but gave evidence of having seen better days and was genteel in his deportment. He fell in love with Miss Laura, and in spite of his being a tramp she returned his love, although she told him she could never think of marrying him.

Recently Henry Snodgrass, one of her unknown suitors, appeared and was rejected. On the next day Harry Williams, the other man with whom she had corresponded, was to appear. But she waited all day and he failed to put in his appearance.

That evening the tramp spoke to her of love and she told him she loved him, but could never marry a poor man. Throwing off his disguise, Harry Williams, young, wealthy and dressed in the height of fashion, stood before her. Miss Keller was quite overcome at the denouement, but all obstacles having been overcome she renewed her love vows and they were married. Williams is said to have wealth and social standing, says a special to the New York World, but took the disguise of a tramp to ascertain unsuspected what manner of girl Miss Keller was. Both were satisfied.

Tommy's Hammer.

The Beachem family was a happy-go-lucky one, and rosy-cheeked Bridget, just a week over from the old country, seemed a most appropriate handmaid. For the most part her mistakes amused and delighted them, but on one occasion a mistake came near making serious trouble.

She had been with the family two days, and was in the nursery with 3-year-old Tommy.

"Bridget," cried Mrs. Beachem, as she rushed into the nursery, "Mr. Beachem has just telephoned me that he left his revolver on his dressing table by mistake, and it isn't there! Have you seen it? I know you were there tidying up the room."

"What is it like, mimm?" asked Bridget. "There was a little thing about so long, wid a crook like at van end, and brought like silver. Could that be it? O I gave it to Tommy for to hammer his little tacks into the board, but he had no fancy for it, and O I think he floong it under the bed. Xis, mimm, there it is, away over in the far corner."

Mrs. Beachem glanced under the bed. The revolver was there. "Let it stay until Mr. Beachem comes home," she said, faintly. "I'll take Tommy into my room and lock up the nursery."

What He Said.

"Never," said the person of good advice to the delinquent Boston youth, "never say 'I can't.'"

"Indeed, sir," responded the intellectual lad, "I trust that my delusion is so open to criticism. If you will but be attentive to my conversation you will observe that I say 'can't.'—Baltimore American.

UNITED STATES SENATOR JAMES M'MILLAN, WHO DIED SUDDENLY.

M'MILLAN'S LIFE ENDS.

Michigan Senator Passes Away Suddenly at His Summer Home.

Senator James H. McMillan of Michigan died suddenly at his summer cottage, at Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. His death, which was due to congestion of the lungs and heart failure, came after a few hours' illness.

Senator McMillan was an ardent golfer and he spent Saturday on the grounds of the Essex Country Club in the sport, although he was not entered in the tournament. While ascending a steep hill he felt faint and was sent to the club house and given a stimulant. He recovered, returned home and ate a hearty dinner with his family, seeming in the best of spirits. At midnight he was aroused from sleep by difficult breathing and a physician was summoned. He found Mr. McMillan suffering from heart trouble and one of his lungs was congested. Under a powerful stimulant he revived and soon was asleep again. A second attack more violent followed and the doctor found the other lung congested. Restoratives failed to give relief and the Senator died at 4 o'clock.

At the bedside when the end came were the Senator's wife and daughter, and his granddaughter, Miss Jarvis.

James McMillan was born in Hamilton, Ont., May 12, 1838, and was a resident of Detroit from 1855. Early in his commercial success of that city he became identified with its manufacturing interests and became in a few years one of the big men of that city and of the State and the railroad, lake marine, banking, manufacturing and general commercial world. The foundation of his fortune was laid in the lumber field. Early in life he became interested and active in politics as a Republican. In 1884 he was a presidential elector. From 1895 to 1899 he served as chairman of the Michigan Republican State committee. In 1880 he was elected to the United States Senate, and in 1895 and again in 1901 he was re-elected. His present term expired in 1907. In Washington Senator McMillan lived in a palatial home at 1114 Vermont avenue. In the Senate he had great influence, especially in committees where legislation was framed, and in the inner circle of Senators who do the real work of that body. He practically ruled the District of Columbia and the capital city as chairman of the committee on the District of Columbia.

BRYAN SETTLES IT.

Nebraska Says He Will Not Be a Presidential Candidate in 1904.

William J. Bryan settled the rumors that he will be a candidate for President in 1904 in an interview the other day while on the way to Danville, Ill., where he was to speak. Col. Bryan, when shown the report that he might again be a candidate, was much nettled and expressed himself in no uncertain manner. He said he wanted the matter settled right now so there could be no further question.

"I will not be a candidate for President in 1904," said Mr. Bryan. "While I would not promise never to be a candidate again under any circumstances, I have no plans looking to the future nomination for any office. I am perfectly content to do my work as a private citizen, and enjoy my editorial work. I shall continue to advocate with tongue and pen reforms which I believe to be necessary."

Swedish Emigration to America. The total emigration of Sweden to America during the last fifty years has exceeded 850,000, while about 150,000 Swedes have gone to other countries. Of the emigrants to the United States only 5 per cent have returned to their native country.

The census report on the meat industry in the United States shows a capitalization of $180,000,000 and 921 establishments. Illinois is the leading State in this business, Kansas second, Nebraska third and New York fourth.

IMPALED ON THE HORNS OF A TEXAS STEER.

Near Tulsa, I. T., a Creek Indian boy, Charles Mingo, was found dead early in the morning, securely fixed on the horns of a wild Texas steer. He had evidently been there all night. When found the steer was trying to dislodge the boy by rubbing against the banks of a small ravine in which the animal was standing, completely tired out from all night's run. The other cattle were standing about him greatly excited.

The steer was immediately shot and the boy taken from his horns. The boy, who was terribly mangled and bruised by the horns, one of which ran clear through the body. The boy was seen the night before playing in the pasture, and it is supposed he was lost and wandered among the cattle during the night.

NEEDS A NEW SEAL.

Uncle Sam to Get the Fourth in His Long Career.

The State Department is about to provide itself with a freshly cut "Great seal of the United States," to replace the present old one, which is so worn with excessive use as no longer to make the proper impression upon the important state papers to which it must be attached. Provision was made expressly by Congress for the recutting, to cost $1,250, on recommendation of Secretary Hay, and the work is now in progress.

In the entire history of the United States only three great seals have hitherto been used in succession, a new one of the same general pattern as its predecessor having been cut as each existing one became worn out. These three were cut respectively in the years 1782, 1841 and 1885.

Frederick W. Vanderbilt of New York has given $500,000 to erect a dormitory for Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University.

The Registrar of Princeton University announced Wednesday that twenty-two students from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., were debarred from admission to the university on the charge of cribbing in the entrance examinations.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology has decided to establish a course in what is called insurance engineering, the purpose of which will be to instruct students in the selection and constructive use of materials with a view to minimizing the risk of destruction by fire.

President Remsen of Johns Hopkins announced the completion of a $1,000,000 endowment fund by the citizens of Maryland, which will enable the university to move to the new site presented by Baltimore citizens. This places the

Was Sick Eight Years with Female Trouble and Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never in my life given a testimonial before, but you have done so much for me that I feel called upon to give you this unsolicited acknowledgment of MRS. JENNIE E. O'DONNELL, President of Oakland Woman's Relief Club, the wonderful curative value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For eight years I had female trouble, falling of the womb and other complications. During that time I was more or less of an invalid and not much good for anything, until one day I found a book in my hall telling of the cures you could perform. I became interested; I bought a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was helped; I continued its use and in seven months was cured, and since that time I have had perfect health. Thanks, dear Mrs. Pinkham, again, for the health I now enjoy."

DEFERS DASH TO POLE

BALDWIN EXPEDITION ESTABLISHES PERMANENT BASE.

Food Supplies and Packs of Dogs Ready for Arctic Night—Elaborate Equipment Handy for Next Year's Work—Season Bad for Progress.

The Baldwin-Ziegler Arctic expedition is back at Honningsvaag, Norway, having made no attempt at the northward dash to the pole. Advanced stations have been made with stores of food supplies, packs of dogs and several Siberian ponies are stabled in the far north, permanent camps have been erected, where a full equipment may be found, and all the preparations are made for a vigorous dash north in 1903. Evelyn S. Baldwin, the head of the expedition, summed up the result of the year's trip in one sentence.

"We have been baffled," he said, "but not beaten."

Mr. Baldwin pointed out that the trip was expected to last five years and that but one year had passed. He stated that the ice formed so early last fall that the steamer was unable to advance far enough to establish the supply stations and that it was necessary to wait for the spring for this work. So much of the spring was taken up that in June it was found necessary to go back upon the reserve supplies, and in order not to cripple itself in this manner the expedition returned home.

Explorer Baldwin continued: "I dispatched fifteen balloons with 300 messages and in June I obtained the first moving picture of Arctic life. I also discovered Nansen's hut, recovering original documents and securing paintings of the hut. I shall remain at Tromsø a week for repairs to the ship, which was damaged by the ice on the return voyage."

Rev. F. B. Meyer, pastor of Christ's Church, London, whose writings on religious subjects are well known and popular in America, is making a long-promised visit to the United States. Mr. Meyer is noted as a hard worker. During the last year he has been at Christ's Church the congregation has almost doubled, and it is now 2,400. In connection with this church there are employed from Jan. 21 to May 21, and this severe work resulted in the destruction of sledges and depletion of the food for ponies and dogs, thus rendering our return imperative."

The America and Belgica, two of the three ships of the Baldwin-Ziegler Arctic expedition, sailed from Tromsø, Norway, July 17 of last year. The ships proceeded to Archange in Russia, picked up the third ship, the Frithjof, and then sailed to the Island of Vardoe, off the coast of Norway, from whence the departure was finally made for Franz Josef Land. From there the trip to the pole was to have been made with all possible rapidity.

TO END LABOR WARS.

Judge Would Compel Corporations to Submit to Arbitration.

The most widely known jurist of the West is Judge Murray F. Tuley of Chicago, who since 1870 has been a Circuit Judge in Cook County. He is noted for his liberal interpretations of the law and for the full enunciation of advanced opinions on political and social questions. Recently Judge Tuley discussed the relations of labor and capital and advanced a plan for the settlement of disputes between them. He would have State legislation requiring corporations to submit to arbitration all industrial disputes with their employees, where the employees wish it, under penalty of forfeiture of their charters in case of refusal. He regards corporations as creatures of the State, which should be required to go at least half way in arbitration for the benefit of the community. As for the laboring men and the unions, the judge believes that they will always be ready to do their share in arbitration, but in case they do not he suggests that they be compelled to incorporate and so become themselves amenable to the law. If the corporations are required to arbitrate Judge Tuley believes that the social problems of strikes and lockouts will be solved.

Boy Wears No. 20 Shoes.

When Louis Merkanen, a youth of Boston location, near Houghton, Mich., buys a new pair of shoes the shoemaker must "build," not "make," them. There is a distinction. Louis does not wear an ordinary shoe. He wears quite an extraordinary one, for in size it is No. 20. Louis is just 10 years old. Notwithstanding his youthfulness he is 7 feet tall and weighs 280 pounds. He is the wonder of his community, for his parents are small. His mother is not over 5 feet tall, while his father is medium sized.

Louis went to a local shoe dealer the other day and ordered a new pair of shoes and now the wielder of the awl is busy "building" a pair of lasts the size of Louis' feet. The lad grows three inches a year on an average and if he does not stop growing—which is unlikely—he will be 8 feet and 2 inches in height when he is 20 years old. Two years ago he wore a No. 16 shoe. Last year when he was confirmed at the Finnish church the shoemaker "built" a pair, size No. 18, for that event. At this rate if his feet continue to grow as they have he will require size No. 28 when he is 20 years old. Louis had some difficulty in entering the door of the shoe store, for there was just a fraction of an inch to spare, but he made it all right. However, Louis is good natured and happy, as most large people are.

Gave His Panama Away.

"I feel like hiring some one to kick me," said Jim Foraker the other day, "when I look in the windows of the hat stores and see the prices of Panama hats, and think what I did with mine. You see, a couple of years ago, just after the Spanish-American war, a friend of the senator sent up a pair of beautiful Panamas, and the senator gave me one. Well, it was rather big and broad, and the only time I wore it was to go fishing. Then I got tired of the thing lying around the house and gave it to the janitor of the building I live in on Walnut Hills. Now that gentleman is walking around in about the best Panama in the city, and if I want one I will have to put up for it. The next time anyone sends me a curious-looking hat I'll keep it until it comes into style."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What a Good Name Does.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 11th.—Mr. Vahlberg, of 222 South Pearl St., this city, had for years been an invalid with liver complaint and kidney trouble which was fast hastening him to the grave. The doctors gave him up and his friends and neighbors all declared he could not live.

His brother came from Minneapolis to see him before he died and inquired if he had tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

On being told that this remedy had not been used he went out at once and bought a box, feeling satisfied from what he knew of Dodd's Kidney Pills and the noble work they had been doing in Minnesota, that they would save his brother's life.

The first two days Mr. Vahlberg seemed to grow worse, but after that he gradually improved under the treatment and was soon restored to complete good health.

High Praise.

Mr. Matthews knew that his mother's pies were the best he had ever eaten, but his mother had died long since, and had not left any record of her wonderful method.

He wished to encourage his wife as much as he conscientiously could in regard to the result of her efforts to attain his ideal; but he was not gifted with any special graces of speech.

"Now this pie looks just the way it ought to," he said one day, after Mrs. Matthews had spent a hot morning in the kitchen, "and it tastes well-seasoned and all. And the crust, well," said the honest husband, with an illuminating smile, "this crust ain't half so timberly as the last one was—not half."

Popular with the Teapot, Too.

"Mamma, what is the coffee pot singing?" asked 4-year-old Mabel as she sat in her high chair patiently watching her mamma prepare breakfast one morning.

"Oh, it is just singing," answered mamma.

"I know, mamma," said Mabel. "It's singing 'A Hot Time.'"—The Little Chronicle.

The Value of Science.

"After taking several remedies without result, I began in January, 1901, to take your valuable remedy, Peruna. I was a complete wreck. Had palpitation of the heart, cold hands and feet, female weakness, no appetite, trembling, sinking feeling nearly all the time. You said I was suffering with systemic catarrh, and I believe that I received your help in the nick of time. I followed your directions carefully and can say today that I am well again. I cannot thank you enough for my cure. I will always be your debtor. I have already recommended Peruna to my friends and neighbors and they all praise it. I wish that all suffering women would try it. I testify this according to the truth."—Mrs. X. Schneider.

Over half the women have catarrh in some form or another. And yet, probably, not a tenth of the women know that their disease is catarrh. To distinguish catarrh of various organs it has been named very differently.

Did Not Know the Llama.

A very curious load of deck passengers arrived in San Francisco the other day on the Hamburg-American steamer Nicaragua. There were no less than seven llamas from the Peruvian Andes—animals so very valuable at home for their soft wool and for their services as beasts of burden that their export is prohibited by the Peruvian government. These were exported through the courtesy of the government and are destined for menageries.

The llama is a second cousin to the camel, only that he is much smaller and humbler. In prehistoric times the ancestors of the llama were common in California and Colorado. In temperament the llama is something like the mule. He is terribly obstinate and has a deadly sneeze, which is a sure shot and warranted to inflict any target at fifty yards. While on the Nicaragua's deck one of the llamas was prodded by a smart Alek with an umbrella. The beast's lip began to quiver, but the umbrella wielder persisted, and after the sneeze the llama's tormenter went below and took a bath.

Too Late.

The waiter pushed the finger bowl toward Uncle Cyrus, who was dining at the Waldorf-Astoria.

"No, thankie," said Uncle Cyrus, with some haste. "Yew didn't bring that when I fust set down, an' it's too late now."—New York Sun.

A Poor Seller.

"Don't you think," said the conceited young author, discussing his first book, "that we should have every copyright?"
"It looks," interrupted the publisher, "as if we were more likely to have every copy left."—Philadelphia Press.

THE NEWS.

A REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPER.
PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
A. B. JOHNSON, - Publisher
By Mail, One Dollar Per Year, in Advance.
THE NEWS Guarantees a Larger Bonafide
Circulation in Western Lake County, than Any Paper Published in the State.
ANTIOCH, ILLINOIS.

It has been given out that Powell Clayton Ambassador to Mexico, denied to the State Department that he owned any stock in Mexican mines, but the facts made known by an official letter from him explain that he took charge of some stock belonging to a female relative, for its better protection. It did to do so properly he had to become a director of the company, and to become a director had to become personally owner of a few shares.

Twenty new cotton seed oil mills will be in operation by the time the cotton crop is harvested, and this in spite of the fact that the late suits against the trust failed, although reorganization of the trust and any agreement as to prices, was prevented. This fall there will be a "free for all fight" for business, with not enough cotton seed in sight to supply all the mills.

The weather bureau reports that devastating rains have caused floods in many sections, while crops are burning up in others. The corn crop has, perhaps, been the greatest sufferer but the chances are that there will be more than the average crop. Peaches are said to be plenty, Connecticut alone furnishing 800,000 baskets.

The Water Motor & Power Company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, will soon begin the erection of an extensive power plant at Great Falls, on the Virginia side of the Potomac, about eighteen miles above Washington. It expects to supply practically all of the Washington industries with power.

The newest thing in ordinance is a shell that does not explode until its "penetrative ability has been exhausted," or until it has reached its final destination. Its penetrative power is said to equal fourteen inches of Krupp armor, two inches thicker than that used on any battle ship in the world.

The able men which the republican party has sent to the Senate are a sufficient guarantee of the ability of the party to meet every emergency. To contrast them with the Senators who represent the democracy in the upper chamber of Congress would be rough on mediocrity.

A colored woman in New York state has just discovered that she is no longer a slave. She had been brought from Kentucky by an old soldier, upon his return from the war, who it is alleged sold her to one Silas A. Snell. An attorney has brought suit to recover $2000 for her services.

The American Shipbuilding Company, of Chicago, announces that the various yards of the company are filled to overflowing with orders for work. Twenty-nine orders for modern steel steamers have been received, aggregating a money value of nearly $9,000,000.

Twelve per cent of the manufactures of the United States are produced by trusts and against one of those the administration is conducting a suit with every prospect of success. The actual figures make democratic agitation look insignificant.

When the American machinist concludes that he would rather work for $4.46 per day, the wages paid machinists in Glasgow, than for $2.25 per day, the wages paid the machinists in New York, he will cast his vote for democracy and free trade.

Senator Cullom, of Illinois, paid a recent visit to Washington, and while there impressed upon his friends that the two questions foremost in the minds of the voters of his state are Cuban reciprocity and tariff revision.

A vote cast for the republican party is a vote cast for a known policy and one that has proven its wisdom. A vote cast for the democratic party is a leap in the dark and an endorsement of a policy no one can define.

Minister Wu will undoubtedly remain in Washington until next year on account of important duties connected with the State Department in connection with the payment of the Chinese indemnity.

The Iowa State Convention decided for Roosevelt for President in 1904, and in favor of tariff revision to the extent of reduction of the tariff on those products handled and controlled by trusts.

The democratic party evidently needs one more stinging rebuke at the polls in order to wear its free-silver folly—and the republican party is ready to administer that rebuke.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad have advanced the pay of 6,000 of their men from 5 to 15 per cent, which is additional evidence of republican prosperity.

A unified party lead by an honest and energetic leader is the goal toward which the republicans of the United States are traveling.

100 BALLOTS; NO CHOICE.

Remarkable Convention held by the Democrats of this District.

Peter McDermott, of Lake.....22 votes
Edmond Desmond, of McHenry.....21 votes
C. V. O'Connor, of Boone.....7 votes

One hundred ballots and no choice for minority representatives is the record for the senatorial convention for the Eighth district, held Thursday afternoon, Aug. 7, at Harvard, Ill. For one hundred successive times Lake county gave its candidate its full vote, 22; McHenry did likewise with its 21 and little Boone stuck to the faith giving O'Connor 7.

It was the most remarkable convention ever held by the Democrats of the district and despite the hard fight for the nomination, neither side showing any signs of giving away, everything was harmonious and no feeling arose as has been the case in former conventions. The outcome of the unswerving attitude of the three delegations was that the convention adjourned to meet today at the Sherman house in Chicago, when the contest for the nomination will be renewed.

From the present outlook and from the statements of delegates that they will never turn their support, it looks as though the Democrats will not have a candidate up for the minority representation.

Here is the way it happened: The senatorial committee met and named L. H. Wilcox, of Boone, as the temporary chairman, and George Lynch, of Libertyville, as temporary secretary.

The first show-down came on forming the permanent organization when Boone and Lake hitched up. While the temporary chairman was a Boone county man Boone's delegation refused to vote with McHenry to make him permanent chairman but instead vote with Lake for Michael Hussey of Lake to preside. Thus Lake had the chairmanship and the secretaryship.

They voted and voted and voted and over again. It was truly monotonous but there was no swerving. At last, just giving the Lake County men time to catch the train, the adjournment was taken.

What the outcome will be it is hard to surmise. It looks as if the dead lock will stick.

OBITUARY.

The subject of this sketch, Leverett Pitt Barnes, was born in Bridgeport, Onida county, New York, in 1822, and spent his boyhood days like many other young men of his time in hard manual labor, attending the district schools of that day in which he acquired the rudiments of a common school education, his sound judgment, industry and quick perception to grasp the situation supplying, in a great measure, his educational qualifications for what proved to be a successful career of over thirty years in which he acquired a competency that placed him beyond want or the necessity of further labor. He was married in 1845 to Miss Elizabeth Warren, a native of York State, and shortly afterward started for the then far west, settling upon a farm at Fox Lake, where he remained until 1852, when he moved to Antioch and engaged in farming and mercantile pursuits under the firm name of Barnes & Shepard, later under the firm name of Barnes & Richardson, and still later as Barnes & Williams, this firm continuing until 1879 when he sold out his interest here in the store to E. B. Williams and removed to Salem, Wis., where he entered into partnership in the mercantile business under the name of Barnes & Warner, continuing this business for several years when he disposed of his interests in the store and retired from active business pursuits. His first wife died in 1855 leaving two daughters surviving, Claire and Cella, the latter subsequently becoming the wife of O. C. Stevens and departing this life at Virgoon, Wisconsin. The other daughter, Claire, still survives as the wife of E. E. Judd, of this city. In 1886 Mr. Barnes was married to Sarah Warner who survives him and resides at Salem, Wis. Mr. Barnes was a man of the old school of sturdy citizens, honest, progressive and enterprising, and was universally admired for his sterling qualities as a man and a citizen. Always and at all times "Jack Blunt" and outspoken, those who knew him knew where to find him, and finding him could tie to him as a sturdy oak that bended not to the breeze or swerved not from a fixed purpose.

The funeral was held from his late home at 11:30 a. m., August 4, and was conducted by Rev. Montague, the interment being at the Antioch Hillside cemetery. His death occurred Saturday, Aug. 2nd, 1902, at the ripe old age of 80 years.

DINNER IN THE WOODS.

Enthusiast Talks of Delights of Trout Properly Cooked.

In the deep shade of the tree the baskets are laid, and now a fire is started near by, one of Van Dyke's little "friendship fires," which shall also cook a few trout. "Get two flat stones, friend—and they'll be hard to find in this build-up country, but they are sometimes worn quite flat—while I gather some sufficient wood." Into the fire the stones go, and the wood is heaped about them. Soon the intense glow of live wood embers indicates that the time has come. The trout, a silver of bacon in each, are placed on a stone, first well dusted of its ashes, and the other stone is laid upon them. Now the hot embers are raked about and over the stones, and the lunch is spread on the big rock near the spring. Oh, ye epicures, who think nothing good unless served by a Delmonico or a Sherry, go ye into the mountains, follow a brook for half a day, get wet and tired and hungry, sit down by an ice-cold spring and eat brook trout cooked on the spot, and delicious bread and butter liberally spread with clover honey. Not till then have ye dined—Outing.

Warns Ambitious Youths.

Mayor McNamee of Cambridge, Mass., told the scholars at Webster grammar school the other day that he hoped none of the boys would ever become a mayor and none of the girls the wife of a mayor. He said he could wish them no greater injury than that any of the boys should become a Democratic mayor of a Republican city.

Not Over Wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is every where recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

BRISTOL, WIS.

Dr. R. B. Rice and wife are visiting at James Bryant's.

Mr. E. Van Foulke is in Chicago, taking the X-ray treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Shothoff spent Saturday and Sunday in Chicago.

Mrs. C. Bishop and Mrs. Anna Sholliff were Kenosha visitors Friday.

Louis B. Weed, an old Bristol boy is visiting friends and relatives here.

Allison Stonebreaker, of Red Cloud, Neb. is visiting his many Bristol friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dixon and son spent Tuesday of last week at J. E. Dixon's.

A negro minstrel show is billed for next week; almost anything except a ten cent social will be a treat.

Mr. McGee, the well known insurance solicitor spent the latter part of the week in Bristol and vicinity.

It is said the Whitcher block has changed hands, the name of the purchaser is being withheld for the present.

Arch Murdock and Frank Fox were at Zion City one day last week hauling lumber for George Nixon's new house.

J. E. Dixon has started a restaurant and bakery in the building formerly used by George Nixon as a millinery store.

Mr. Frank Struck, of Irelon, Iowa, and Mrs. Barbara Fritz, of Lamare, Iowa, are here to attend the funeral of their father Casper Struck.

Casper Struck, an old resident of the town of Bristol, died Thursday morning. Mr. Struck was one of the oldest settlers of Kenosha county.

Mr. Chas. Murdock, our expert machinist, is very busy these days setting up binders. Charley seems to have a "bulge" on the binder business this season.

The Stewards of the M. E. Church are getting ready for a "sock" social. There will be a guessing contest after the socks are all in. This contest will no doubt enliven the whole affair for it is said a fine present goes to the winner.

The people of Bristol and vicinity were quite liberal in their gifts of money, clothing and provisions to the Deaconess Home at Lake Bluff. This missionary work ought to be encouraged far more than it is.

The stereopticon and lecture given by Rev. W. D. Cole on Wednesday evening was well attended, and those who were not there missed a splendid talk on the Holy Land. Rev. Cole gave a new insight into that part of the Scripture which deals with Jerusalem.

Our school marm has received their certificates and those who, up to this date have not been fortunate enough to find a school, are now hustling to find one. The teachers are all high in their praise of the County Superintendent, especially those who won the much longed for "first" and "second."

GRAYSLAKE, ILL.

Plan to attend the reunion at Grayslake August 27 and 28.

Mrs. Farr, of Russell, is visiting Mrs. Godfrey and family.

Mrs. Matt. Sullivan is entertaining her mother from Huntley, Ill.

Mrs. Mench, of Chicago, is visiting her niece, Mrs. W. B. Higley.

Miss Zinn, of Troy, Wis., is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. A. R. Riel.

Mrs. Smith Wright visited at Burlington and Rochester last week.

Warner Colby, of Russell, visited Howard Higley Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Johnson spent Sunday with relatives at Prairie View.

Mrs. McLane, of Waukegan, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. F. C. Wilbur.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mende, of Oak Park, visited friends here on Monday and Tuesday.

A large attendance is expected at the county convention to be held here on Aug. 23rd.

Maud VanDuzer returned to Waukegan on Monday after spending a week with Alice Strang.

Mrs. Garretson entertained her uncle from Chicago at the Gardiner House the latter part of last week.

Dr. Palmer is looking more pleased than ever, the cause being the arrival of a baby boy at his home on Tuesday.

The Church Aid society will meet at the home of Mrs. J. Wicks on Wednesday, afternoon, Aug. 20. Visitors welcome.

The Church Aid society will give a five course supper in the new basement of the church Thursday, August 21, from 5 p. m. and throughout the evening the first course will be served in the pink and white room, and so on, each course having its room. Soup, chicken pie, mashed potatoes, etc., will be served, all for 25c. Come all.

From Bath to Lobby.

A Liberal member was caught by a division in the house of commons yesterday while taking a bath. By wrapping himself in a long coat and turning up its collar, the honorable gentleman was able to discharge his duty to his constituents—London Mail.

Actress of Aristocratic Birth. After the recent death in Vienna of an actress named Louise Mayerhofer, her papers were examined, when it was discovered that she was a daughter of de la Motte-Fouque. She was born at Paris in 1822.

THE DORF'S BLACK-DRAUGHT FOR CONSTIPATION

Constipation is nothing more than a clogging of the bowels and nothing less than vital stagnation or death if not relieved. If every constipated sufferer could realize that he is allowing poisonous filth to remain in his system, he would soon get relief. Constipation invites all kind of contagion. Headaches, biliousness, colds and many other ailments disappear when constipated bowels are relieved. The Dorf's Black-Draught thoroughly cleans out the bowels in an easy and natural manner without the purging of calomel or other violent cathartics.

Be sure that you get the original The Dorf's Black-Draught, made by The Chattanooga Medicine Co. Sold by all druggists in 25 cent and $1.00 packages.

Morgan, Ark., May 26, 1901. I cannot recommend The Dorf's Black-Draught too highly. I keep it in my house all the time and have used it for the last ten years. I never gave my children any other laxative. I think I could never be able to work without it on account of being troubled with constipation. Your medicine is all that keeps me up.

Collars of English Statesmen.
The marquis of Salisbury wears the biggest collar in parliament; it is exactly 19½ inches in circumference. The biggest collar in the house of commons encircles the neck of Sir William Harcourt, and is 18 inches around. The highest collar ever worn in parliament was that which graced the neck of "Bobby" Spencer; it was 4½ inches in depth.

Good Record of a Watch.
Although 125 years old a watch owned by a gentleman in Gloucestershire, Eng., still keeps excellent time. It was worn at Trafalgar, during the Peninsular war, at Waterloo, through the China war in 1840, and finally in the Indian mutiny.

A High Grade Dairy Feed! Barker Lumber Co.

If you are interested in a feed that analyzes 25 per cent protein and 7 per cent fat, read the following: You have no difficulty in buying high grade feeds at high prices but you seldom have an opportunity to buy them at reasonable prices. We offer you this opportunity now.

A MILK PRODUCER
One Dollar invested in this feed will go as far as $1.50 in any other. This may seem improbable at first, but when you consider that a feed containing 25 per cent protein and 7 per cent fat can be bought at the price of bran, you will readily agree with us. It is practically the only high-grade feed offered at a moderate price.

WHOLESALE AND PALATABLE

There is just enough oil in this feed to keep your stock in the best possible condition. They will thrive on it and relish it, and it will never fail to produce a large flow of rich milk. It can be substituted with great saving for any feed you are now using to provide the necessary amount of protein for a balance ration. It is an especially good substitute for gluten feed in the analysis of the two feeds are very similar.

A WONDERFUL WORK.

To be a man who can excel one hundred thousand men in any one line is good; to be one in a million is better; but to be the only living man, the only man in the history of the world, who has drawn a perfect single line picture, is the greatest feat of the century. This Mr. Fleming, author and illustrator of "The Pan," and "Around the World in Eighty Days," has done. In his drawing of McKinley, he has shown the greatest feat of the century. The drawing is a perfect single line picture, and it is the only one of its kind in the world. The drawing is a perfect single line picture, and it is the only one of its kind in the world. The drawing is a perfect single line picture, and it is the only one of its kind in the world.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS

Free Transportation to Attend the Special and Annual Meeting at Chicago.

Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the Company's office in Chicago, Illinois, on Friday, August 29th, 1902, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon; also that the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Company will be held at its offices in Chicago, Illinois, on Wednesday, October 15, 1902, at noon.

To permit personal attendance at these meetings there will be issue to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company as registered on the books of the Company at the close of business on Friday, August 1, 1902, and to stockholders of record on Friday, September 19, 1902, a ticket entitling him, or her, to travel free over the Company's Lines from the station on the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address to Chicago and return, such ticket to be good for the journey to Chicago only during the four days immediately preceding, and the day of the meeting, and for the return journey from Chicago only on the day of the meeting, and the four days immediately following, when properly counter-signed and stamped during business hours—that is to say, between 9:30 a. m. and 5:30 p. m.—in the office of the Assistant Secretary, Mr. W. G. BUNN, in Chicago. Such ticket may be obtained by any holder of stock registered as above, on application, in writing, to the President of the Company in Chicago. Each application must state the full name and address of the stockholder exactly as given in his or her certificate of stock, together with the number and date of such certificate. No more than one person will be carried free in respect to any one holding of stock as registered on the books of the Company.

A Profitable Investment.
When the Chemical Manufacturing company of New York was reorganized in 1884 as a "free bank" John David Wolfe invested $20,000 in 200 shares of the stock. When the estate of the late Catherine Lorillard Wolfe, his daughter, came to be settled and the Chemical bank stock she had inherited from her father was sold it was found that the estate had received in dividends, increased price of stock, etc., not less than $1,750,000 on the original investment of $20,000.

Tolstol Writing Autobiography.
Prof. Berthensohn of St. Petersburg, who recently visited Count Tolstol at Yalta, says that he is quite well again, and at the urgent solicitation of his friends, is writing his autobiography. The Russian painter Pasternak of Odessa, who made the illustrations for Tolstol's "Resurrection," has lately completed a painting representing the novelist in the midst of his family. His wife is reading to him and the others are listening, too.

Helping a Novelist.
William Le Queux, the novelist, also known by his familiar signature "Q," has been appointed British consul to the tiny republic of San Marino. This little bit of government patronage is undoubtedly given him in order to further his preparation of a history of San Marino, upon which he has been engaged for several years. The book, however, is nearly finished and will appear by the beginning of 1903.

Mourning by Ten Widows.
Ten widows, all near relatives, mourned over the grave of Leonard G. Neighbour, who was buried at Callton, N. J., a few days ago. The deceased was the youngest of a family of ten children, five boys and five girls. All the boys are dead, but the sisters are now living and all are widows. The widows of his brothers are also living, as is his own widow.

Burning of Guayaquil.
It is too bad that it required a $6,000,000 fire to call the world's attention to the fact that Guayaquil, Ecuador, is enough of a city to furnish such a costly and magnificent spectacle. It can't repeat the performance on the same big scale right off, for the city is said to be almost obliterated by the fire.

Selling Fireflies in Japan.
Fireflies are sold nightly by peddlers in crowded quarters of Tokyo and other Japanese cities. The number of firefly dealers in Tokyo is estimated at more than forty. The insects sell for 3 rin apiece, a rin being equal in value to the twentieth part of a cent.

One Boer in Luck.
It appears that the reason why Gen. Plenaar, the chief of the Boer prisoners in Lisbon, does not propose to return to the Transvaal, but will become a Portuguese subject, is that he has discovered a gold mine near Colmar, Portugal, which he intends to exploit.

Chances of Longevity.
A doctor says that persons who attain their thirtieth year without suffering from any serious illness are likely to live till they are at least seventy-three years of age.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

Illinois Central Through to Florida
Beginning Monday, Jan. 6, 1902, the Illinois Central will run a through sleeping car between Chicago and Jacksonville, Florida, via Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta. It will leave Chicago daily at 6:10 p. m. and arrive at Jacksonville the second morning, running over the celebrated "Dixie Flyer" scenic route. This is an extension of its all-the-year-round Chicago and Nashville sleeping-car line.

THEY LIKE ERUPTIONS.

Hawaiians Pray for Volcano to Become Active.

"In Hawaii we pray for Mt. Kilauea to become active, and the more eruptions there are the better we like it," said Philip Peck, a banker of Hilo, at the New Willard last night. "An eruption does not harm," he added naively.

"Doesn't do any harm? Well, it appears that Mont Pelee did plenty of harm."

"That was a different kind of an activity from Mt. Kilauea. In Hawaii, where Mt. Kilauea has not been disturbed for two years, the eruption is of slight consequence. But it is a great sight to see the great lake of lava boil over the sides of the crater and push its way down into the bowl-like valley which has been formed by eruptions more violent in the ages past.

"The sight is such, an unusual one that it causes a great influx of visitors each year, and that naturally is a good thing for the island financially. That's why we like the volcano to be active. Kilauea's crater is the largest in the world. People used to go and sit by the edge to watch for an overflow of the lava. The guides could tell almost to the minute when these overflows would occur.

"In 1882 there threatened a great eruption, and the natives were afraid that the town of Hilo would be injured. The Princess Ruth, of the royal family of Kamehameha, went to the mountain down which the lava had begun to run. With her she carried several chickens and one or two other animals. Standing by the edge of the crater, she threw up her head—she was one of those imperial-looking women and weighed about 400 pounds. She called out, addressing the Hawaiian god:

"Pelee, you promised never to hurt Hilo; now I come to remind you of your promise."

"With this she threw the chickens into the lava. The next day the disturbance somewhat subsided, and the natives attributed to the princess the credit of it."—Washington Times.

BRIDEROOM'S SAD PREDICAMENT

Newly Married Man Forgot Partner of His Joys and Sorrows.

"It was pretty hard to have the honeymoon clouded before we had been married two hours," complained a newly married man. "Fact is, though, the excitement of the wedding day took away the little sense I had remaining.

"We were married at noon, and after dodging the customary rice and old shoes, left for the station. We had barely time to catch our train, and I rushed up to the ticket window at once. Then, once more, we had to run the gauntlet of friends, who think it smart to throw rice down one's collar and have it sift down into one's shoes. "We got into the train at last and when it started I heaved a sigh of relief. When the

In a collision between a freight train and a work train on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, four miles east of Collins, Iowa, eleven men were killed outright, two have since died and about thirty were injured seriously. The trains came together in a deep cut and on a sharp curve, when it was impossible for either engineer to see the other train more than three or four car lengths away.

Each train was making good speed, the freight to make up lost time out and the work train to reach a point to meet the freight. The flat cars on which the laborers rode were telescoped and the men thrown in all directions and buried under the debris. It is said the wreck was due to a misunderstanding of orders on the part of the conductor of the work train.

ROB EXPRESS TRAIN.

MASKED BANDITS TAKE $2,000 FROM BURLINGTON LIMITED.

Torpedo Tracer Near Savannah, Ill., and Halt Flyer Northbound-Train Crew Forced to Remain Quiet While Safe Is Blown Open—One Robber Slain.

Train No. 47 of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad was held up by six masked robbers at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday night, the express car blown up with dynamite and the safe robbed of a sum estimated to be $2,000.

The robbery took place about 125 miles from Chicago between Savannah, Ill., and Marcus, a flag station eight miles north of that place. Torpedoes were placed on the track by the bandits and as the north-bound train exploded them the engineer shut off the steam and applied the brakes, thinking that there was danger ahead.

The moment the train came to a stop one of the masked robbers sprang aboard the engine and thrust a revolver into the face of the engineer and another at the fireman. Both members of the engine crew were threatened with death unless they obeyed the commands of the robbers.

Cut the Train in Two.

Meanwhile another bandit stepped between the express car and the passenger coaches and cut the train in two. He then sprang aboard the engine and ordered the engineer to pull up the track. When the engine had proceeded a short distance to a point far from any human habitation the robbers ordered a halt. The engineer, with a revolver muzzle pressed close to his ear, had nothing to do but obey.

The robbers were well equipped for the task before them. They drew sticks of dynamite from bulging pockets and went toward the express car, taking along the engineer and fireman.

Arriving at the door of the express car, the robbers set off the dynamite in their possession. This blew the express car to pieces. The big safe in the car was then shattered by another explosion of dynamite.

The money having been revealed when the safe was blown, one of the robbers began to pick up the cash and throw it into a bag he took from a pocket. A robber fled into woods.

When the pile of money in sight had vanished inside the bag the "coin collector" gave the signal and his confederates marched the engine crew back to their posts. The engineer and fireman were told to pull out as fast as possible from the scene.

The moment the locomotive began to move the robbers fled into the blackness of the night and the big patch of woods that lined the railway track. As they were disappearing in the brush Express Messenger Byl fired and killed one of them. The authorities have been unable to determine the identity of the dead man.

Meantime a flagman on the train of coaches that had been left a few miles back on the road, suspecting at once what had happened, started on the dead run for Savannah to give the alarm. On the way he heard the sound of the double explosion that wrecked the express car and the safe.

After a run of several miles the flagman arrived at Savannah. He was then breathless, but he managed to tell a short story of the fate of the train.

Officers Start in Pursuit.

Police and railway officials were hurriedly summoned by the station agent, to whom the flagman had reported. It was then 1 o'clock and some difficulty was encountered in getting engines and men together.

At 1:30 o'clock, however, an engine was attached to a coach and the latter, filled with heavily armed officers and railway employees, started from Savannah for the scene of the robbery. It was the intention of the officials to beat the woods on both sides of the railway in an endeavor to catch the bandits.

TRACY KILLS HIMSELF.

Outlaw, Surrounded by Posse, Ends His Life Near Fellows, Wash.

Harry Tracy, the bandit, shot himself and died almost instantly in a wheat field near Fellows, Wash. He was surrounded by a posse which had been successfully held at bay for hours.

Tracy had been held at bay for hours. Armed men from miles around were on the outlaw's trail. The exchange of shots between the bandit and his pursuers was at long range.

None dared approach within reach of Tracy's deadly weapons, and he was not wounded in the process. This was his last battle. The members of Sheriff Gardner's posse also escaped without injury.

Reports received at Creston, Wash., Tuesday night stated that Tracy was surrounded in a swamp near the Eddy farm, eleven miles southeast of the town. Jack McGinnis brought the news and sought re-enforcements. Shortly before midnight McGinnis left Davenport, Wash., with twenty-five heavily armed men in a wagon. Before they arrived Tracy had left the shelter of the swamp and taken to the open country. It is thought he expected to overawe his enemies and repeat the remarkable successes that marked his career.

He had been hard pressed for many hours and the theory is that he found his strength leaving him. Disdaining to fall by any but his own hand, the worst "bad man" that ever killed his man in the "wild West" shot himself and prevented the distinction of being Tracy's slayer from falling to one of his pursuers.

Brief News Items.

Aside from heavy rains in Texas, the week's crop news is encouraging. Manufacturing plants are well occupied as a rule, iron and steel leading, followed by textiles and footwear. Fuel scarcity is still causing delay, although coke ovens are surpassing all previous figures of output, and bituminous mines are vigorously operated. At most points retail trade is active and preparations continue for heavy fall sales, while spring lines are opened with good results. Railway earnings thus far available for July show a gain of 3.3 per cent over 1901 and 20.8 per cent over 1900.

With business in sight for at least a year, the leading departments of the iron and steel industry may properly be considered prosperous. Notwithstanding the rapid increase in producing capacity, consumptive demand has grown still faster, and the recent official report of a new high record of pig iron production at 8,803,574 tons for the first half of 1902 is accompanied by the statement that un-sold stocks at the end of that period were only 29,811 tons, compared with 372,500 tons a year previously. The first month of the second half of 1902 has brought no diminution in inquiries, but some decrease in output owing to scarcity of fuel. Imports are very large in order to keep the steel mills provided with material and offerings of foreign billets have checked the upward tendency of prices. Of engines, machinery and heavy hardware there is a serious shortage, orders for delivery in 1902 being out of the question. Steel rails and structural material contracts have been booked far ahead.

Grain prices declined sharply as the month of speculative manipulation drew to a close and legitimate trading resumed a more normal volume. Cotton held fairly steady, more because of the large short interest than the floods in Texas. Thus far it is probable that rains have done more good than harm. Demands for consumption continue liberal. Meats have also shown a tendency to seek slightly lower quotations, but light receipts and higher quality do not promise any extensive relief in the immediate future.

SUES HIS WIFE'S RELATIVES.

Farmer Wants $5,000 as Sequel to Unique Divorce Case.
In the Circuit Court of Cook County, George R. Shoemaker, a prominent farmer living in Pleasant Grove Township, has instituted suit for $5,000 damages against James Butler and Philetus Butler. The defendants are the father and uncle respectively of Shoemaker's former wife and the plaintiff alleges they are responsible for the alienation of his wife's affections. The damage suit is the sequel to two bitterly contested divorce trials, in which valuable property rights were involved. Shoemaker and his former wife lived together for seventeen years. They were childless and six months ago Mrs. Shoemaker began divorce proceedings, alleging as cause a provision of the statute perfectly legal, but which has never before been resorted to in that section of the country. She was defeated in the first trial, but a decree was granted at the second trial. The husband appealed the decision to the Appellate Court and the higher tribunal's ruling will result in a legal precedent.

BEAT A VILLAGE PRESIDENT.

Illinois Coal Miners Assault Dr. W. C. Gabbert of Trilla.
Dr. W. C. Gabbert, president of the Village Board of Trilla, a leading physician and Republican politician, was assaulted by Frank and Ross Rardins, coal miners, and their brother-in-law, Robert Brown, and seriously injured. The Rardins brothers and Brown drove to Trilla with the avowed purpose of wreaking revenge upon Gabbert for a fancied grievance. As the physician emerged from his office he was knocked down several times and while prostrate kicked into unconsciousness. A posse of citizens pursued the assailants, but the Rardins brothers escaped. Brown was captured and bound over for trial. Last April Edward Rardins, a well-known farmer and father of Frank and Ross Rardins, died. He carried a policy of $2,000 in the Modern Woodmen order. There was some delay in the payment of the policy and the sons conceived a grudge for the physician, attributing the delay to him.

NEW COAL COMBINE FORMING.

Chicago, St. Louis and New York Capital Backing Southern Illinois Deal.
The coal combination of southern Illinois, which has been under formation for a year or more, is in part a reality, although only eleven working mines have been brought in so far. Thousands of acres of undeveloped lands, supposed to reach 14,000, have also been purchased. The new combine is known as the El Paso-St. Louis Securities Company and is capitalized at $400,000, with a proviso permitting its capital to be indefinitely enlarged. The Williamson Coal Company of Saline County and others at present hoisting about 10,000 tons of coal daily are the nucleus around which the corporation is being formed. The land in the combine is a strip which will extend nearly to the Ohio River and through which a new railroad is to be built. The Congressman W. S. Foran of East St. Louis has been a prime mover in the deal, and is backed by Chicago, St. Louis and New York capital.

CUTS DAM AND RUINS CROPS.

Charles Mannion Accused by Neighboring Farmers of Causing Flood.
The big dam across the Green River, near Rock Falls, was cut the other evening, allowing a great volume of water to escape from the pond above and to flood about 25,000 acres of land. The flood damaged crops and buildings to the amount of $100,000. Charles Mannion is alleged to have cut the dam, and the farmers organized with the intention of punishing him. He heard of their actions and mounting a fleet-footed horse made his escape. The farmers continued their search for him, but it is believed he got to Den Rock, where he secured a train. His horse was found in a grove near the station. The pond and river were greatly swollen on account of the recent rains and as the flood swept over the country it carried with it all of the small buildings in its path and washed the corn crop out of the ground.

The marriage was celebrated at the residence of the bride's parents. Many guests were present. The bride is a niece of ex-Vice-President A. B. Stevenson.

The boilers at the large brick flaring mill of Senator Hull and William Draper at Salem, exploded, demolishing the building and killing the engineer. The mill was located near the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad depot and a passenger train was on the track at the time of the explosion. One of the cars was badly damaged. The depot was also considerably injured. The damage aggregates several thousand dollars.

Illinois leads every other State in the Union in the amount of internal revenue taxes collected during the fiscal year ending June 30 last. Illinois turned in to the national treasury $54,020,115 out of a total collection of $271,807,090, a decrease of $95,032,879 over the previous year. The taxes collected at the various districts in Illinois are: Peoria, $31,207,050; Chicago, $11,181,071; Springfield, $10,601,050, and East St. Louis, $883,080.

Joseph Mandenack of Chicago was beaten to death while a patient in the Dunning insane asylum. Killed so severely that several ribs were broken, internal injuries sustained, and death followed quickly in the wake of the brutal treatment he received. This was the verdict of the coroner's jury. Officials at Dunning are unable adequately to explain the man's death. They are insistent in their declarations that Mandenack could not have been the victim of the wrath of the attendants.

W. D. Ragsdale, a merchant and farmer of West Vienna, was shot and killed at his farm eight miles west of Vienna by his son, S. O. Ragsdale. The father and son previously had trouble about the management of the farm owned by the father and killed by the son. The father went to make a contract with his son for the wheat crop, but the young man refused to sign. The father then demanded possession of a team, but when a young man ran into the house, secured a revolver and returning opened fire on the father, shooting him five times, killing him almost instantly.

CROSS IN THE EARTH.

Remarkable Fracture Discovered at Troy, Ill., After a Storm.

Residents of Troy are puzzled by the appearance after a severe electrical storm of a cross-shaped fissure in the ground near the school building, one arm of which is 40 feet long and about 8 inches wide, and the other 20 feet long and 6 inches wide. Elias Burke, a carriage manufacturer whose establishment is in the vicinity, discovered the freak of nature soon after the storm. Where the arms of the cross converge there is a hole two feet in diameter and a line 150 feet long weighted with lead did not touch bottom. The theory is advanced that a bolt of lightning entered the ground, yet those in the vicinity assert that no unusual bolt of lightning was noticed during the storm.

STATE HEALTH BOARD UPHOLD.

Appellate Court Sustains Its Ruling on "Standing" of Colleges.

The Illinois Appellate Court has decided that the State Board of Health is possessed of discretionary power to determine whether a medical college is in "good standing," and its action is not subject to review by mandamus proceedings. The decision was handed down in the appeal of the State against M. P. Bailey, a graduate of the medical department of the University of Tennessee, whose application for a certificate to practice his profession in this State was refused. Dr. Bailey sought to secure a certificate through mandamus proceedings. He won his case in the Circuit Court, but the Appellate Court reversed the judgment of the lower tribunal.

EXPELS TWENTY STUDENTS.

Northwestern Faculty, Evanston, Sends Notices to Their Parents.

Twenty Northwestern students, many of them prominent in the social and literary life of the university, have been notified by the ethics committee of the faculty that their presence is considered a detriment to the morals of the student body and that the doors of the institution will be closed against them in September. A variety of charges, among them immorality, gambling, the use of prohibited examination papers and low scholarship, formed the reasons for the expulsions. Coeds as well as men students appeared on the list. Three of the seven sororities at the college have representatives on the list, while every one of the nine fraternities is affected.

RIVER CHANNEL CHANGED.

Prophetstown Now a Mile Away and Considerable Loss Results.

Rock River at Prophetstown has changed its channel and is now flowing one mile from the original waterway, leaving the city one mile south of the river. What is known as the great ox bow, a semi-circle course of the river, is no more, the water having forced a channel through the center of the bow. Prophetstown is on the north side of the bow and the new channel gives the river a different course. The channel began forming about a year ago. Considerable money was expended in reclosing the channel, but the heavy rains of this summer succeeded in forcing a channel through the bow. Only a slough is now left beside the hustling little city.

DEAF MUTE TEACHER A SUICIDE.

Charles Kerney Kills Himself After a Long Illness.

Charles Kerney, son-in-law of the late Orlando Powers, one of the wealthiest men in Macon County, shot and killed himself at the Powers residence in Decatur. Kerney was a deaf mute and was married to Annabel Powers, also a deaf mute. The family life had been happy, but Kerney had been in bad health for two years. Physicians recently told him he could not live, and this is believed to have unsettled his mind. He formerly lived in Evansville, Ind. He was prominent as a deaf mute educator and had a national reputation as a teacher of the deaf.

PANIC ON PASSENGER TRAIN.

Mill Boiler Near Station at Centralia Explodes on Arrival.

A boiler in the flouring mill of Hull & Draper at Salem exploded, killing Engineer P. B. Lefter and injuring Robert Messer, a small boy, standing close by. Serious damage was also done to a Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern passenger train that had just pulled into the station, which is near the mill. The sleeper of the train suffered the most serious damage. It contained but one passenger, who had a miraculous escape. There was almost a panic among the passengers in the forward coaches, some jumping out of the windows.

SLAIN BY CARELESS BROTHER.

Springfield Boy Victim of Accident at Dinner Table.

Albert Aberto, aged 10, was accidentally shot at Springfield by Joe Aberto, his 14-year-old brother, who was examining a rifle, which he accidentally discharged. The injured boy died nine hours after the accident. The shooting occurred at noon at the Aberto home. Albert was at the dinner table, when Joe, who was toying with the weapon, approached him and accidentally pulled the trigger.

Illinois Gains in Foundries.
The Foundry for August publishes the results of an inquiry into new construction in the foundry trade in the first six months of 1902. It finds that 462 new foundries are under construction or have been projected during this period, or an increase of nearly 8 per cent.

Boy Killed in Wheat Bin.
Kenneth Cooper, 10 years old, was smothered in a wheat bin in the Henderson Elevator Company's elevator in Grayville. He was working in the elevator and was not discovered until the chute was stopped up with his body.

EDWARD IS CROWNED

THE KING IS GIVEN THE SYMBOL OF MAJESTY.

Historic Service Loses Nothing of Orateness by Its Diminution—Details of the Ceremony Show It to Be Harmonious at All Points.

The coronation of King Edward and the Queen Consort Alexandra has at last taken its place in history. In famous Westminster Abbey—like the national church and the national mausoleum of Great Britain—where a long line of British sovereigns have been crowned and where repose the ashes of potentate and subject, of statesmen and warriors and scientists and men of letters the crown of Kingly jurisdiction has been placed upon the head of England's seventh Edward.

Toned and subdued was the ceremony Saturday as compared with the gorgeous spectacle which was planned for June 20 last and which had to be deferred owing to the critical sickness of the King. To meet the changed situation, the ceremonies within the abbey were curtailed and much of the pomp and splendor was omitted. The coronation was simpler in tone and was as much a thanksgiving service

In historic Westminster Abbey were gathered representatives from every corner of a worldwide empire, to lend grace and impressiveness and majesty to the scene. There were the immediate members of the royal house of England. There were colonial premiers and envoys from states which were independent of the British government when Victoria was crowned sixty-four years ago. There were the lords temporal and the lords spiritual of the United Kingdom, resplendent in their robes of state and embodying the power and the influence which have made England great and respected among the nations of the world. There were peeresses in their jewels and coronets and crimson robes and other lovely women reflecting the graces and the beauty of foreign lands. There was united almost all grades of civilization and almost all of the religious beliefs common among men. There the representatives of republican simplicity touched elbows with the representatives of constitutional royalty and with those who still adhere to the rule of autocracy and despotism. The east met the west within the historic walls and Indian princes with pedigrees and family traditions dating back for thousands of years gazed upon the same scenes with representatives from that land of yesterday—Australia.

Lacking in Display.

Amid such a scene as this King Edward and Queen Alexandra were crowned. They drove from Buckingham Palace to the abbey in the royal state coach drawn by eight cream-colored Flemish horses—the same used by the late Queen Victoria in the year of her jubilee. The route to the abbey was ablaze with decorations and was lined by vast numbers of people. There were vacant places on many of the stands, however, for a large share of the sightseers gathered for the coronation last June have since scattered over the continent, while some returned to their homes in America and in the provinces.

The intensity of the enthusiasm aroused over the coronation date in June had died out to a large extent and the scenes in the streets as well as in the abbey were tame compared with what they would have been had the coronation taken place in June. In the abbey there was not the picturesque and imposing audience that would have witnessed the coronation in June. There were no foreign princes in attendance and the special envoys who came to London for the coronation in June had returned to their homes. The gathering was thus more of a domestic or rather of an imperialistic nature. The colonies through their premiers were well for the restoration of the King's health as a display of ostentatious power and pride. Salutes from the Tower of London and the guns at Hyde Park at 4:30 a. m. boomed out a welcome to coronation day. The sunrise found many people on the streets, some of whom had not lain down all night, and many others who had represented and the picturesque touch was added to the gathering by the Indian princes.

Ceremony of Coronation.

The ritual of the coronation was curtailed greatly and no unnecessary strain was laid upon the King. The ceremony did not last longer than an hour and physicians were on hand in case there should be any demand for their services. All superfluous prayers and functions were omitted. The coronation of the King was carried out by Archbishop Temple and the anointing and crowning of Queen Alexandra by the Archbishop of York.

While the postponement of the coronation in June was a great disappointment to the people, there is no disguising the fact that the King's sickness, by arousing public sympathy, has greatly popularized him. And the note that ran through the coronation ceremonies of Saturday was one of satisfaction and rejoicing that the King has been restored to his people.

REPRESENTED ARMY AND NAVY.

Rear Admiral Watson and Major General Wilson.

Rear Admiral Watson, the American navy's coronation representative, has spent forty-six years in Uncle Sam's sea service. He saw the hottest kind of fighting during the Civil War and blockaded the north coast of Cuba during the Spanish war.

Maj. Gen. James H. Wilson, a gallant veteran of the Civil, Spanish-American and Chinese wars, represented the army at the coronation ceremonies. He was a corps commander under Sheridan and is the author of several books.

The World's Volcanoes.

Since the disasters in Martinique and St. Vincent somebody has taken the trouble to count up the world's volcanoes. The total, according to the Paris Siecle, is about 1,000, of these 325 are still classed as active. "Extinct" volcanoes, however, are suspect. After the destruction of Pompeii Vesuvius lay quiescent for three centuries.

Charles Willis, aged 15, and Walter Hendricks, aged 10, fell off a raft of logs between Newberg and Rockport, Ind., and were drowned.

RUSSELL SAGE, NEW YORK FINANCIER, IS 86 YEARS OF AGE.

RUSSELL SAGE.

Russell Sage, who recently celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday, is one of the picturesque characters of the time and has been prominent in New York for more than half a century, not alone because of his great wealth, which runs up in the many millions, but also on account of his original personality. Mr. Sage began life as a farmer's boy, but at the age of 12 was hired to a grocer, and soon owned a store of his own in Troy, his native State. In early life he dabbled in politics, and was Alderman of his town in 1845. Railroad operations soon attracted him, however, and when Jay Gould began his gigantic stock manipulations Mr. Sage was his most intimate friend and business associate. Mr. Sage has figured in most of the large Wall Street epics and crises of the last quarter of a century, and in some spectacular personal escapades.

KNOX IN CAFE QUARREL.

Attorney General Punished Philadelphia Millionaire.

Attorney General Knox admits that he was a participant in an unpleasantness in a cafe at Atlantic City, but he claims that published accounts of the affair have been greatly exaggerated.

ATTY.-GEN. KNOX.

He was the means of inflicting condign punishment upon one of the party.

According to Mr. Long, private secretary to the Attorney General, who was present, a party of men, including several Philadelphia millionaires, among whom were said to have been Charles T. Schoen, Theodore Cramp and Mr. Stevenson, entered an Atlantic City cafe and took a table near that at which the Attorney General, his family and several friends were seated.

Some of the newcomers became boisterous, Mr. Long says, and used excited language and such that it became unpleasant to Mr. Knox and his friends to remain near them. Mr. Knox accordingly asked a waiter to step over and request that the loud language cease. The waiter did so, and the men, becoming enraged, grew more violent than before.

"Well," Mr. Long concluded, "the result was a slight encounter. It is not true that Mr. Knox was struck. One of the other men got it good and hard, however. He was struck by one of our party. I don't care to say who struck him. Then order was restored. That's all there was to it."

This is the story according to a New York correspondent.

TYPHOID IS EPIDEMIC.

Chicago Health Statistics Show Big Increase in Disease.

Typhoid fever is epidemic in Chicago, according to reports from hospitals and statements of physicians. At the Cook County Hospital Friday there were 250 cases of the disease, or more than three times as many as were under treatment at the corresponding season last year.

That typhoid fever is swiftly increasing in prevalence is shown by the fact that of the 250 cases at the county hospital 117 have been gained since the beginning of August, the record for July being 133. In other words, the increase has been 88 per cent in less than a third of a month. The whole city, according to the health department, has 40 to 50 per cent more typhoid cases than are normally known at this season of the year.

If the epidemic keeps up for three days more the capacity of the Cook County Hospital will be exhausted. "Then," said Warden Hoppel, "we shall have to place beds in the corridors unless private hospitals come to our relief." The county hospital, it is said by medical men, affords a fairly reliable test of the general health of metropolitan Chicago, since the patients are drawn from all sides of the city and from the suburbs.

News of Minor Note.

May Irwin, home from England, says she has quit the stage.

Fire in Pittsburg business district caused $300,000 loss. Explosion injured five firemen.

George D. Middleton was electrocuted at Clinton prison, New York, for the murder of his wife in 1901.

The steamship Roslin Castle sailed from Hamilton, Bermuda, for South Africa with the first party of returning Boers, numbering 350 persons, on board. The sloop Lovell Delle, owned and sailed by Captain Allen N. Calder, of Thunderbolt, Ga., was captured during a squall and Captain Calder's father and mother, wife and infant daughter were drowned.

The Serbian cabinet, which resigned on July 24, has ended the crisis which resulted from the resignation by consenting to remain in office.

Yip Hay, the Alaska Chinese murderer, taken from the steamer Dolphin committed suicide in jail at Port Townsend, Wash., that night by strangling himself with a shoestring.

O. W. Coffey, charged with the assassination of Santa Fe Detective Montgomery, was transferred to the jail of Sedgewick County, Kan., by order of Judge Lawrence, because of threats made to rescue him.

Distinguished Japanese Patriot.

Marquis Salgo Teugumichi, the distinguished statesman who died of cancer recently in Yokohama, played such a prominent part in liberating Japan from the rule of Tycoon, and in restoring the mikado, that he has been known as "the oriental Garibaldi." He it was who in 1862 drew up the Japanese declaration of independence, for doing which he was confined in a small cage for three years, until he could neither stand nor walk. He recovered in time to largely aid in the Tycoon's overthrow. The marquis was highly educated and held numerous government offices of high grade.

All were Saved.

For years I suffered such untold misery from Bronchitis, writes J. H. Johnston, of Broughton, Ga., that often I was unable to work. Then when everything else failed, I was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. My wife suffered intensely from asthma, till it cured her, and all our experience goes to show it is the best cure medicine in the world. A trial will convince you that it is unrivaled for throat and lung diseases. Guaranteed, bottles 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at W. T. Hill's.

Accustom Horses to Autos.

So many horses have been frightened by automobiles in and around aristocratic Lenox that Courtland Field Bishop and Albert B. Shattuck have undertaken the task of accustoming all horses to the unusual sight and sound. Every morning they take out a few of the thoroughbreds and introduce them to the motor cars. Their efforts have met with great success, none of the horses so treated now showing any fear of the autos.

First Lesson at Sea.

Admiral Joubert says that when he first went to sea as a cadet he attempted some conversation with the executive officer who received him when he went on board. The officer, one of the strictest disciplinarians in the service, met his advances in this mild fashion: "Silence, sir. Who gave you permission to speak? Let me hear only six words from you sir, while you are on this ship: Port, starboard, yes, sir, and no, sir."

Just Look At Her.

Whence came that sprightly step, faultless skin, rich, rosy complexion, smiling face. She looks good, feels good. Here's her secret. She uses Dr. King's New Life Pills. Result—All organs active, digestion good, no headaches, no chance for "blues." Try them yourself. Only 25 cents at W. T. Hill's.

New Artificial Marble.

A new process for the manufacture of artificial marble has been patented in Berlin. Asbestos, dyeing materials, shallic and ashes are pounded into a stiff mass and then subjected to high pressure. The product is surprisingly firm and tough, not brittle, is very easily worked by means of tools, can be given a fine polish and in appearance cannot be distinguished from genuine marble.

Has Sublime Faith.

One of the "Peculiar People" in Holland recently broke his arm. He declined to call in a doctor, and wrapped a leaf of a Bible round the small toe of his left foot. He declares that this gave him instant relief. He still walks about with a broken arm.

Frenchman Honor Dumas.

On July 5, at the little town of Villers-Cotterets in the department of Aine, there was unveiled a monument commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the elder Dumas' birth. The minister of public instruction delivered an address and a number of artists from the company of the Comedie Francaise presented the most famous scenes from the best known plays of Dumas.

My Hair

"I had a very severe sickness that took off all my hair. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor and it brought all my hair back again."

W. D. Quinn, Marseilles, Ill.

One thing is certain—Ayer's Hair Vigor makes the hair grow. This is because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair and the hair grows, that's all there is to it. It stops falling of the hair, too, and always restores color to gray hair.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address, J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Trade Secret Well Kept.

The secret recipe of the true Eau de Cologne has been a veritable Golconda to the Farina family. There are hundreds of imitations, but the famous "1311 Eau de Cologne" is unique. Rival perfumers have spent thousands in attempting to solve or acquire the secret, but the exact method of mixing the ingredients is known only to certain of the Farinas.

Fame Spoiled His Practice.

The famous surgeon, Sir Henry Thompson, was called in early in his career to perform an operation on the King of the Belgians. This brought him a title and fame, but, says he, "though it made my fortune, it spoiled my practice, for I was inundated with applications for similar operations, and henceforth could do little else."

Shatters All Records.

Twice in hospital, F. A. Gullledge, Verben, Ala., paid a vast sum to doctors to cure a severe case of piles causing twenty-four tumors. When all failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve soon cured him. Subdues inflammation, conquers aches, kills pains. Best salve in the world. 25 cents at W. T. Hill's drug store.

To Build Memorial Church.

Joseph W. Ogden, a well-known New York banker, is going to build a church for the Presbyterians at Chatham, N. J., as a memorial to his father, Dr. Joseph M. Ogden, who was their pastor for fifty years. The family of one of Dr. Ogden's life-long friends, W. C. Wallace, who was a classmate at Princeton, will finish and decorate the interior.

A Necessary Precaution.

Don't neglect a cold. It is worse than unpleasant. It is dangerous. By using One Minute Cough Cure you can cure it at once. Allays inflammation, clears the head, soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane. Cures coughs, croup, throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Children like it. W. T. Hill.

Try Orday Plasters.

For rheumatism, pain in the back or side, pneumonia, kidney and heart disease, liver complaint and all kindred diseases. These plasters are formulated for different ailments. Also corn plasters; a sure cure, six for 10 cents. Foot plasters, for cold feet, 20 cents. Agents and canvassers wanted. For particulars address Mrs. J. S. Sutton, General Agent for Lake Co., Antioch, Ill.

Naming Japanese Children.

Japanese parents have a curious plan in the naming of their children. Very frequently a girl receives the name of a flower, but it is quite as likely that she may receive the name of some household utensil, such as saucer or a sieve. The explanation of this is that it is usual to give the child the name of the first object that strikes the eye after its appearance on the scene.

The Queen and Her Pets.

Queen Alexandra is devoted to animals. She has quite a large aviary of doves and also goes in for poultry. Cockle, a fine old cockatoo, has the honor of being often regaled with sugar by his royal mistress. A few cats are included in the list of royal favorites, but dogs hold the largest share in Her Majesty's affections.

A Great Idea.

It is announced that a feature of the coming Woman's Exhibition in New York will be a table on which will be exhibited samples of the sewing of famous actresses. Many men would go far to see a stocking darned by Lillian Russell or a pair of trousers patched by Leslie Carter. That table should draw like a poker game.

Restorations at Athens.

Greek architects have decided that the Erechtheum at Athens must be restored if it is to be preserved. The restorations will be limited to strengthening and to putting in place the fragments about it.

In Jersey.

A farmer of Lambertville, N. J., has died from the bite of a rooster. He had thought that the bite of the Jersey skeeter was the only thing in Jersey for which there was no antidote.

Soldiers as Automats.

To convert a man physically into an imitation of a machine is, we know, no difficult task. Long distance athletes clearly prove this. Soldiers, again, afford instances. During the last army maneuvers of one country a batch of foot soldiers was specially trained for long distance marching. After travelling a prodigious number of miles they were commanded to halt and fire. Not one man could bring his rifle to his shoulder and take aim. Yet at the word "March!" all of them, tottering and unsteady as they were, started promptly to limp on again. They could not perform a fresh action, but their marching had become automatic.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

There Was a Difference.

Harry Sobernheimer, truant officer of the Twenty-first district, Philadelphia, recently made a call at the home of a pupil whose absence had extended over a week, and inquired of the lad's mother, a genial-looking Irish woman, the cause.

"Why," she said, "he's now past his thirteenth year, an' me and his father-r think he's after-r having schoolin' enough, sor."

"Schooling enough?" repeated the officer. "Why, I did not finish my education until I was 23."

"Be that so?" asked the mother, in amazement. Then, reassuringly, after a moment's thoughtful pause: "Well, sor, yez see, that boy of ours has b-r-rains."

He Was Welcome.

The boy in the boarding-house was at breakfast, and was trying his best to eat his egg quickly, so he could take the only one remaining in the dish before another boarder, who he thought had designs upon it, could appropriate it. He was a small boy, much given to using large words at random. The egg still reposed in the dish when he was ready to eat it, so, looking across the table, he remarked apprehensively:

"Is that egg occupied? If it isn't I should like to have it."

The other boarder smilingly replied, "While passing the dish."

"I hope not. If it is you are welcome to it."

To My Friends.

It is with joy I tell you what Kodol did for me. I was troubled with my stomach for several months. Upon being advised to use Kodol, I did so and words cannot tell the good it has done me. A neighbor had dyspepsia so that he had tried most every thing. I told him to use Kodol. Words of gratitude have come to me from him because I recommended it.—George W. Fry, Viola, Iowa. Health and strength of mind and body depend on stomach and normal activity of digestive organs. Kodol the great reconstructive tonic cures all stomach and bowel complaints, indigestion and dyspepsia. Kodol digests any good food you eat. Take a dose after meals. W. T. Hill.

Visited Grandfather's Ship.

Charles H. Hull of Marshalltown, Ia., a grandson of Commodore Isaac Hull, who commanded the frigate Constitution in her memorable fight against the Guerriere, visited the Charlestown navy yard a few days ago for the purpose of seeing the ship on which his grandfather fought. He made himself known to the officers and every opportunity was given him to look over "Old Ironsides" thoroughly. Mr. Hull made the trip—his first visit to the Atlantic coast—chiefly to see the famous old vessel, and on his way he visited the commodore's grave at North Murray Hill cemetery in Philadelphia.

Look Pleasant, Please.

Photographer C. C. Harlan, of Eaton, O., can do so now, though for years he couldn't because he suffered untold agony from the worst form of indigestion. All physicians failed to help him until he tried Electric Bitters, which worked such wonders for him that he declares they are a godsend to sufferers from dyspepsia and stomach troubles. Unrivaled for diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys, they build up and give new life to the whole system. Try them. Only 50 cents. Guaranteed by W. T. Hill druggist.

Give Lives to Charitable Work.

Quite a number of titled ladies have forsaken the luxuries of their home life to devote themselves to charitable works in nurseries. Two sisters of the duke of Norfolk, Lady Frances Bertie, Lady Edith Denbigh and many others are thus living out their principles. If report is to be believed, Queen Margherita of Italy is contemplating the taking of the veil. Rumor is also busy with the name of the ex-Queen Natalie of Servia, who is described as a likely candidate for the religious life.

An Enthusiastic Sportswoman.

One of Lord Salisbury's ancestresses became in 1793 M. F. H. of the "Hatfield Hounds," now known as the Hertfordshire Hounds. A book on British sport says that it was not until Lady Salisbury was 78 years of age that she gave up the hounds and ceased following the foxhounds, and even then she said she thought she was good enough to hunt with the harriers.

Cradle of the Race.

After much careful study and two trips to the polar region, Louis Lind-say Dyche, professor of natural history at the Kansas university, has arrived at the conclusion that the first human beings were born and lived in the Arctic zone.

COURT MADE A JOKE.

New York Supreme Justice Astonishes the Lawyers.

Justice Gaynor of the supreme court is not noted for his good nature on the bench. He is rather inclined to be severe and stern, and lectures the lawyers who appear before him whenever he deems it necessary. No long ago, however, he sprang a joke from the bench and laughed as he did so. The incident was so rare that it is still being talked of by the lawyers.

A young counselor, who had an exceedingly bad case, but was struggling to make the best of it, tried to strengthen his side by abusing the opposition. He continued along this line for some minutes, when Justice Gaynor, raising his hand in his characteristic and deprecatory way, stopped the proceedings.

"Don't you think, my friend, that if you rub it in too hard," said the justice, "you will rub it out?"

The young lawyer, thankful that he had not received a roast, took the hint and started off on another track.—New York Tribune.

Last of Idealistic Coterie.

Rev. John S. Brown, who has just died in Lawrence, Kan., at the age of 97, was probably the last member of the idealistic coterie which many years ago established the famous colony known as Brook Farm. From an intellectual standpoint that socialistic experiment was on a higher plane than any other known to history. Among the noted persons connected with it were Nathaniel Hawthorne, Charles A. Dana, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Bronson Alcott, Horace Greeley, George William Curtis, Russell Lowell, John Greenleaf Whittier, Wendell Higginson and many others. Not all of them lived at the farm, but they heaped it with either pen, purse or wit.

His Sight Threatened.

"While pinning last month my 11 year old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for awhile we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever. For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds and insect bites DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is sure cure. Relieves piles at once. Beware of counterfeits. W. T. Hill.

No Young Man.

News comes from Budapest that the quaint ceremony of bestowing the silver rose of virtue to the most innocent maiden above 16 in the county of Solymar will be abandoned this year because, while there are maidens in plenty, there are no marriageable young men in the county that would fit the requirements. The crowned maiden, according to the statutes, should at the same time be formally betrothed to a worthy peasant boy and receive a considerable dowry.

It Needs a Tonic.

There are times when your liver needs a tonic. Don't give purgatives that gripe and weaken. DeWitt's Little Early Risers expel all poison from the system and act as a tonic to the liver. W. Scott, 531 Highland ave., Milton, Pa., says: "I have carried DeWitt's Little Early Risers with me for several years and would not be without them." Small and easy to take. Purely vegetable. They never gripe or distress. W. T. Hill.

Rule of Spare Living.

If we could exactly tabulate the mode of life of our distinguished men of all professions who have lived to a great age and been intellectually active to the last, I doubt not, judging from the details we have, that we should find the rule of spare living thoroughly represented in their histories. I think it is so with our men of science, our great lawyers, our doctors and our clergy, who live on far past the allotted span of three score years and ten.—London Graphic.

Umbrellas as Lightning Rods.

The steel frame umbrella is light, convenient and much less clumsy than its predecessor with a wooden shaft, but there is an element of danger in it. A woman at Atlantic City a day or two ago was struck by a bolt of lightning attracted by the metallic frame of her umbrella, and men have been killed by inadvertently letting the steel points of their umbrellas come in contact with low-hanging electric lights.

Chewing Tobacco a Necessity.

They have a Sunday closing ordinance in Joplin, Mo., and under its provisions only necessities may be sold. A grocer was accused of selling plug tobacco on Sunday, but his attorney raised the point that chewing tobacco is a necessity. Judge Brown, before whom the case was tried, took the same view and discharged the accused. Then he took a fresh chew of plug and called the next case.

Caused Panic in Portugal.

News has been received of an extraordinary phenomenon recently observable at Pedross, near Oporto, Portugal. The sound of a tremendous explosion was heard, and a flame-colored column of smoke was swept across the town by a furious cyclone, which tore up trees by the roots. The phenomenon lasted two minutes, causing a great panic among the inhabitants.

Love's Little Day.

A little day, and a little way,
And your hand in mine, my dearie,
And never a thorn with a rose of May,
And never the way seems weary,
Never a fear,
Never a tear,
Never a storm where the stars shine clear;
But the light of Love when the dark draws near
Ar' your hand in mine, my dearie!

A little day, and a little way,
And your hand in mine, my dearie,
And this is the rose—the rose of May
Over a heart grown weary!
Over a breast
In dreamless rest—
Over the tresses Love kissed and caressed,
And the Darkness whispering, "God knows best!"
And your hand in mine, my dearie!
—Atlanta Constitution.

A Maid's Way.

BY SARA LINDSAY COLEMAN.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
It was a pretty bit of road. It climbed the hill to where a dainty white silhouette against the emerald sky, for the hour was sunset, the season spring, a slip of a girl stood waiting, her face towards the brilliant west, dejection in every line of her sweet young body.

Williamson knew the silhouette—oh, how well he knew it!

As the smart trap came nearer he gave the reins to the groom and sprang to the ground.

"I came on purpose," the girl spoke half defiantly. "I wanted to tell you—No," with a quick frown, "not that—"

Williamson helped her into the trap and sent the groom on to the station.

"Well," he said at length, and sighed.

Since she had not come to tell him the one thing nothing else mattered very much.

He took out his watch and consulted it gravely; she leaned back as if she intended remaining indefinitely. It was a way she had. Perhaps other women were like that—he did not know. The whole sweep of his life had been away from women.

"Well," he said again. Unconsciously he opened the other lid of his watch.

The girl gave a quick, amazed little cry. She leaned forward. "Where did you get my picture?"

Williamson laughed. There wasn't much mirth in the laugh.

"Waldmere and I are old friends," he said. "When he asked me to the house party he inclosed this picture. I—that's why I came. House parties are not much in my line." He looked down at the picture with a wonderful softening of his rather stern young face.

"Did you think I was rich," the girl asked, a touch of suspicion in her voice.

Williamson hesitated.

"Did you want to marry me for my money?" This in fine scorn.

Williamson threw back his head and laughed—a burst of genuine merriment.

A line of hardness spoiled the curves of the girl's mouth.

"I must thank Mr. Waldmere for his interest in me," she said. "Not only my picture, but my private affairs."

Williamson put up the watch and turned his eyes full on the girl.

"Dear child," he said, "rich or poor it does not matter a raindrop to me. I hesitated because the question had never been in my mind before. You may be rich—all of you here belong to a life of which I know but little. It seems empty and wearisome and vapid to me. I came because of the picture. It caught and overwhelmed me. I was horribly afraid after I got here—almost ready to turn and run for fear you would be disappointing. Women (his lips twitched boyishly) have never touched my life intimately—I didn't know they could hurt one so."

"Oh," the girl said, "how perfectly horrid I am! It's just that crazy people always think everybody else crazy. I never went to a house party before in my life. I'm as poor as a church mouse. I work in my uncle's"

"The long train was almost past. But her words came fast as April shower. "I want you without it all," she said. "I want you if we must be poor. I'll tell him that he isn't available—rejected with thanks."

You have seen the sudden flash of sunlight on steel—then you have seen Williamson's face.

He swung up on the last coach; there wasn't time to do more, and stood there watching the flutter of her handkerchief until the train was lost around a curve.

"Why, Miss Livingston," said a voice at her elbow, as she crossed the platform to the trap, "I didn't know you were here. I believe I did hear it, though. At the Waldmere's party, aren't you. I've come down for the break up. There was a girl on I know so I didn't get off until the last minute. Just caught a glimpse of old Billy—never heard of him at a house party before."

The young fellow who called Mr. Williamson Billy put her in the trap and leaned over the wheel as though loath to go.

"Billy's got a romantic notion that he wants to be married for himself. I heard that he had the Waldmores under promise not to mention his millions. Is it so? Why (laughing), don't you know?"

"Billy owns his town, almost. He's president of the Lord knows how many mills. He's absolutely crazy over his factory people's comfort, and is forever building churches and schools for them—they fairly worship him."

"Now, I wonder," said the fellow who called Williamson Billy, as he stooped and struck a match on his shoe, his eyes following the departing trap; "I wonder what that look on her face meant." He laughed. "Guess she's refused him, not knowing."

You can't have your cake and eat it, but you can eat your own cake and swipe the other fellow's.

"I don't want you to hate me. I slipped away from them all to beg you not to."

Oh, the strength in his face, in his voice, in the quiet hand that laid on hers.

"He asked me, too, last night—just after you did—he is so old—so old—I couldn't say yes just then—your eyes came between. I—I begged for time."

Williamson's hand closed suddenly on the fingers that lay quiet under his. "Why," he said, in a tone that for him settled the whole matter, "you love me."

"I'm going to marry him," the girl said defiantly. "I'm going to leave the stuffy office forever, and the typewriter—I hate the typewriter. It makes my head ache—and my back—and I go home so tired, so tired, and the splendid faces in the big brass frames look down at me—there's nothing much in the big, empty room but the pictures—we've sold everything else to collectors of antique furniture—and they seem to say, 'Poor little girl, poor little girl, we are sorry for you.'"

"Oh, now," Williamson said; there was a sudden mist in his eyes; "we'll change all that. I'm glad you didn't say yes to the old fellow. I feel sorry for him, a fellow feeling; but it

As the smart trap came nearer he gave the reins to the groom and sprang to the ground.

"I came on purpose," the girl spoke half defiantly. "I wanted to tell you—No," with a quick frown, "not that—"

Williamson helped her into the trap and sent the groom on to the station.

"Well," he said at length, and sighed.

Since she had not come to tell him the one thing nothing else mattered very much.

He took out his watch and consulted it gravely; she leaned back as if she intended remaining indefinitely. It was a way she had. Perhaps other women were like that—he did not know. The whole sweep of his life had been away from women.

"Well," he said again. Unconsciously he opened the other lid of his watch.

The girl gave a quick, amazed little cry. She leaned forward. "Where did you get my picture?"

Williamson laughed. There wasn't much mirth in the laugh.

"Waldmere and I are old friends," he said. "When he asked me to the house party he inclosed this picture. I—that's why I came. House parties are not much in my line." He looked down at the picture with a wonderful softening of his rather stern young face.

"Did you think I was rich," the girl asked, a touch of suspicion in her voice.

Williamson hesitated.

"Did you want to marry me for my money?" This in fine scorn.

Williamson threw back his head and laughed—a burst of genuine merriment.

A line of hardness spoiled the curves of the girl's mouth.

"I must thank Mr. Waldmere for his interest in me," she said. "Not only my picture, but my private affairs."

Williamson put up the watch and turned his eyes full on the girl.

"Dear child," he said, "rich or poor it does not matter a raindrop to me. I hesitated because the question had never been in my mind before. You may be rich—all of you here belong to a life of which I know but little. It seems empty and wearisome and vapid to me. I came because of the picture. It caught and overwhelmed me. I was horribly afraid after I got here—almost ready to turn and run for fear you would be disappointing.
